When a contract is made between a manager and a player, almost invariably it contains the familiar "twoweeks-notice." This takes the place of a guarantee that the company will not strand for lack of financial backing on some desert isle, as it were, far from New York. It is an express understand-ing that the player shall be informed by means of a "call-sheet" posted in the theater, of the date of closing, at least two weeks previous thereto. the same time the player obligates him-self not to leave the company except upon two week's notice. Then, too, it is an unwritten law in the profession-when not actually stip-ulated in the contract-that the manager of a company shall pay the railroad transportation of the players back to the place, or places, at which they were engaged. Usually, in the ab-sence of a contract, the manager vol-untarily obligates himself to do this, and very rarely one encounters the and very rarely one encounters the spectacle of a manager going back on his word, and on his people. In the "Hello Bill" case, it is alleged that both obligations, of two weeks no-tice and transportation, were ignored, notwithstanding that the company's season seemed to be prosperous.

WHILE IN THE SOUND COUNTRY.

San Francisco Dramatic Review: The "Hello Bill" company which has been playing on Puget Sound for several weeks, closed Friday of last week at Chehalis, Wash. It had been billed to play Wednesday evening, but the manager of the company canceled the en-gagement, explaining that one of the stars had left, making it impossible to go ahead with the performance. In consequence of this failure and his inconsequence of this failure and his in-ability to secure a settlement, Man-ager Brunswig of the Chehalis Opera house attached the company's baggage. The manager reluctantl^{*} produced nearly $50 before the baggage and scen-ery could be secured from the sheriff. The members of the company have gone to Portland, with the possibili-ty of going out on the road again from there. Such occurrences are quite usual with this company. Last year's tour was a succession of such inyear's tour was a succession of such in-cidents. The farce is a first-class one and there is generally a good company and there is generally a good company interpreting it, but Manager Kellogg, who is of a very peculiar disposition, is continually rubbing his players the wrong way. While here, several weeks ago, it looked for a time that the entire company might disband. Manager Kellogg, in fact, made several visits to this office for actors, although on the road he has on several occasions taken particular delight in disparaging The Dramatic Review. However, with with ur well known courtesy and fairness toward all managers and actors, we eneavored to help him out, remembering that everybody has their little peculiar ties, and that there are always bound to be some kickers and some pettish-ness in every business.
