CHIFFON HAT WITH OSTRICH ROSETTE.

Of all the hats that women have been known to wear at all the different seasons, none are more generally practical than those made of tulle. With one or two tulle hats, a woman is well equipped for all dressy occasions, summer or winter. This winter will be no exception in the favor given to tulle hats, some of the models from the best Paris makers being in tulle. Contrasting most effectively with the tulle hat is the trimming of ostrich feathers. A novel treatment shows a grouping of ostrich tips in the form of a rosette, the center of which is filled with a draped knot of pale velvet. This is one of the newest and prettiest uses for ostrich tips. Long chiffon veils are again shown on hats. It would seem that as a fashionable accessory to a hat the chiffon veil might have already exhausted all possibilities, but judging from the record already made, the chiffon veil is perennial. Paris has through the summer had a fancy for a soft, sage-green veil. Two or three very interesting fall models in brown and mode have been shown with veils of their peculiar tone draped around the crown. The use of such a veil has not precluded the use of other trimmings—in fact, the most elaborately trimmed models have these veils as an accessory.

Miss Hazel Sappington entertained at a pleasant afternoon function on Tuesday, in honor of Miss Geraldine Brown of California, her guests numbering about 30. Sunflowers and nasturtiums were used in the decorations and the table was assisted in entertaining by Miss Rawlins.

WEDDING BELLS

One of the prettiest home weddings of the season was celebrated Wednesday evening, when Miss Myrtle S. Huff and Mr. Milton S. Webb were married by Rev. W. M. Paden, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. In anticipation of the happy event the handsome residence, 162 North First West, was erected and furnished complete throughout, and with a wedding breakfast of the wedding. Promptly at 7:30 p. m. the bride, leaning upon the arm of Mr.

BARONESS ENTERTAINS KING.

London society has been greatly surprised by the announcement that Baroness De Porez has just had the honor to entertain the king at dinner and she followed this by splendid entertainments at Cowes during the week. She has been known to both their majesties since childhood, for she was the Hon. Ethel Girard, and sister to the present peer, her marriage to the adopted son of the late Baron Hirsch was one of the most interesting matrimonial events in society in 1904. Her husband is an immensely wealthy man with a beautiful house in London, a charming flat in Paris, and a historic sporting estate in Austria.

Charles O. Harris, and preceded by the most of honor, entered the parlor to the strains of the "Wedding March" from "Lohengrin," played by the Misses Nels, Beck and Alice Dwyer, when the groom, assisted by the best man, was standing. The beautiful ring ceremony of the Presbyterian church was also performed by Dr. Paden in an impressive manner, the bride being given away by Mr. Harris. After the ceremony a formal reception was held, being attended by a large number of the friends of the happy couple. The bride was attended in a most becoming gown of white "Jasp" silk a most rare and delicate fabric, a present from an aunt residing in the Philippine Islands. Its delicate texture and beautiful design was enhanced by an understated of sheer lace. The bride carried a magnificent bouquet of bride roses and maiden hair fern and was a most charming picture. The house was elaborately decorated with sweet peas and amilies, the beautiful variegated colors of the former, and the green of the latter adding a most pleasing effect. A large number of beautiful and useful gifts were received by the happy couple.

The bride is the well known chief clerk of the Utah Independent Telephone company, while the groom holds a responsible position with the Nevada Lumber company. The happy couple start life under the most pleasant auspices, and a large number of friends extend their hearty congratulations.

MRS. ASTOR IN SOCIAL WAR.

The dominance of Americans has been the most striking feature in the London social season just closed, admitted on all sides to be the most successful and brilliant in a generation.

The advent of Mrs. John Jacob Astor and Mrs. Potter Palmer this season threatens to overthrow this happy condition. Adherents of these two women have divided themselves into hostile camps and impetuous tongues have been wagging overtime this season.

Mrs. Potter Palmer's success has aroused the fiercest resentment among the New York set. Why the king should invite her to take a house in London; why the king should make so much of the widow of a Chicago tavern keeper, ask her to luncheon at Ascot and Buckingham palace, visit her house in London and at Cowes, is incomprehensible to the members of the New York "Four Hundred."

Unless a compromise is reached this antagonism between social Chicago and social New York will become intense by next season, and it is likely that Americans in London society will be divided into two bitter factions, definitely aligned, ready to battle in this social war of the roses, the opening guns of which have been so vigorously sounded this year.

A wedding reception was given in their honor at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Jones, 47 Twenty-fourth street, which was participated in by relatives and a few intimate friends. A bounteous wedding supper was served in the dining room. The table was decorated with roses and sweet peas. The contrasting parties are well and popularly known here.

The Out-Of-Town

Mail Orders

The Great Care Exercised in Filling Out-of-Town Orders

THE volume of mail orders is steadily increasing. Each order received passes into the hands of a skilled shopper of excellent judgment. The utmost care is exercised in the selection of merchandise at the very lowest prices. If sales are on, advantage is taken of them, and in this way the sender of the order frequently obtains goods at prices lower than is expected. If any certain article is called for and we do not chance to have it at the time, the shopper looks round and obtains the best bargain possible. Often one from a distance cannot designate precisely what is wanted, but having made clear, as nearly as possible, her wishes, it devolves upon the shopper to use judgment in the premises. Rarely is an article returned; rarely does the filling of an order fail to elicit words of thanks by a return mail.
