from a business house at Shafter, Nev.: "Moroni Wight killed; notify family and send coffin." Mr. Wight's brother Lewis, and Davis P. Burt took the next train for Nevada. They found Mr. Wight's sheep camp about 20 miles from Shafter. The day before he had taken the wagon box off the wagon, and with the front running gears, had gone to town for supplies. On his return, in trying to adjust the wagon box again, the edge of the box struck him and pinned him down, breaking his neck instantly. A small boy who was with him was unable to lift the box off from Mr. Wight, so he got on a horse and had to go 10 miles for assistance.

The remains arrived in Brigham Sunday afternoon and the funeral services were held in the Third ward incetinghouse Monday at 1 o'clock. The building was packed with sympathizing relatives and friends. The services were in charge of Bishop Lorenzo N. Stohl. Elders Lorenzo Petersen, H. J. Packer, Bishop Brigham Wright, Pishop T. H. Blackburn, W. L. Watkins, and W. C. Horsley and Oleen N. Stohl of the stake presidency. All spoke of the excellent qualities and sterling worth of the voting man. It takes sunshine to produce a rose, a perfect rose. And so man, to be successful, must have sunshine inside. The life which has it not, which has no health and no happiness, is sour, surly pessimistic, and a failure. The world already has too many vinegar faces that breathe ill-will and strife. The world wants joy, comfort, sunshine, and will cling to the man who has; it, who radiates gladness and triumph wherever he is and under all circumstances.

Some people have a genius for seekidency. All spoke of the excellent qualities and sterling worth of the Colonia Garcia, Chihuahua, Mexico March 2.-Never in its history has this illage suffered such a disaster as now easts its gloom over this usually peace ful valley. One man lies dead and two others are desperately wounded as a result of a boiler explosion which occurred about 10:30 this morning at he sawmill about half a nile south of

The mill was running as usual, and appeared to be in good condition just previous to the explosion. The sawyer, ratchet tender and engineer, were engaged in rolling logs down to the carriage, when one of the other hands noticed that the steam gage registered an unusually high pressure. He immediately called the engineer, who at once went to investigate the matter. It is supposed that he started the injector for instantly there was a load detonation, a cloud of ashes, steam, and flying missiles in the air, and the deed was done.

The huge boiler was tern from its fastenings and huried bodily over the logway; a distance of fully 60 feet. S. C. O'Donnal, the ratchet tender, who was rolling on one of the logs, was hit by the rolling boiler and crushed, with terrible injuries. The fiying boiler barely missed the sawyer, L. B. Farnsworth, who was at the other end of the log. David Foutz, and Orin Farnsworth were standing about 10 feet from the front and slightly to one side of the boiler when the explosion came. Both were laid low by the shock, and Farnsworth was severely scalded by the steam, his face and chest, in particular, being badly burned. Help arrived in the course of a half hour and the injured ones received every attention that loving sympathy could suggest.

The body of George Turley, the engineer, was thrown a distance of about 90 feet, and was shockingly mangled, the whole top part of the head having been blown away, and almost every bone in his body broken.
