

ON A MISSION.

Open Air Preaching—Incident in an English Village.

Correspondence Deseret News.
55 NORTHLOAD ST., Glastonbury, England, May 20, 1893.—The weather for the past several weeks has been lovely, rendering it very favorable for holding open air meetings, distributing tracts, etc., in which we have been very busily engaged of late. We have generally had a fair attendance of the people at our meetings and there has been seldom created much disturbance. The people generally listen very attentively to what we had to say. This has been very encouraging as it enabled us to get the gospel principles before many.

Last Wednesday evening, May 3rd, was the first occasion for some time that we have been disturbed to any great extent. On that evening we visited the town of Street's short distance from here, and after selecting a suitable place in one of the most thickly settled streets announced our meeting and commenced with the usual exercises. All went on very quietly until we were dismissing, when a lady came up, shouting that she was a member of the church. She then informed us that her husband had died. He said that he would inform us, and went on quite a rate for some time about polygamy, the implements of women, Mountain Meadows Massacre, etc., stating that he remained in the church a good deal longer than his wife when he said that he miraculously escaped from the Mormons.

Finding we could not reason with him, we appealed to the audience (which numbered a hundred or more) and asked them to tell us what they thought of the man's statements, allowing us to state our side of the question. To this request a response of "hear, hear," was given on all sides. We then related the facts as to the promises and to our surprise were pleased to find that the audience were in agreement with us. No one made any reply. We then had those good night and started but had not proceeded far when we were overtaken by the father of the young man who had been shouting. He made out that his wife had been ungrateful and brought with her his wife whom he said had withdrawn to be much more liberal than with the Bible. He waved it in their faces at the same time informing the people of its contents.

A few days later an even more unreasonable than his son we again appealed to the audience (which now filled the street) for a chance to state our side and again received the hearty response of "hear, hear." After this we left, our purpose being to attend and deliver a lecture in the city of Utah, where he said the Mormons live. After listening and replying, we took our departure.

We enjoyed a pleasant walk of about three hours through the country, our lodgings, praising God and refusing that we were accounted worthy to be numbered with those who were spoken evil of falsely for the gospel's sake. O. P. BLACK.

Wonderland.

Lovers of comic opera who have not witnessed the performances given by the Ideal Opera company at this popular house should pay the result a visit, for the opportunity is furnished by the management of this house of witnessing the latest comic opera, given by a first-class company, at a price of admission within the reach of all. Commanding on Thursday Gilbert & Sullivan's opera "Iolanthe" will be given with the favorite Miss Moore in the leading role.

A novel exhibition will be soon to the Curio Hall, the management having secured representative cowboy suits and will give a cowboy convention, such characters as Kentucky Frank, Mountain Charlie, Lariat Bill and others appearing.

Where is William Turpin?

W. Smith of Taunton, Bay of Plenty, New Zealand, is anxious to hear of the whereabouts of William Turpin, who left Briglington, near Leeds, Yorkshire, England, a good many years ago. On coming to America he went to Nauvoo and later came to Utah.

Resolutions of Condolence.

The regular practice meeting of the Salt Lake Tabernacle choir, on Friday evening, May 19th, was received, by its committee, that in the death of John Saunders Lewis the organization had lost a faithful, capable and an efficient worker and one who from long years of association had endeared himself to every member by his amiable disposition, even temperament, and genial manner.

While the call was as sudden as to be almost startling in its denouement, we are proud to say we know of no one in the society better prepared for such an emergency than he, and while we mourn with his family we bow to the beliefs of "one who doeth almighty well."

Like many of his countrymen he was of Brother Lewis' descent in harmony. Inherent in his nature it had been his desire from boyhood and next to the Gospel he had been most interested and absorbed in life. His name frequently graced the pages of the Deseret Sunday school song book, the L. D. S. Tabernacle, the Deseret Chronicle and other publications at home as well as abroad. Numerous tributes, with the names of the deceased, have been received that testify to the original and appropriate music of his who writing, formed the crowning feature at the funeral services.

Brother Lewis' death, though it did not occur in Salt Lake City, has caused a favorite status which he had just requested his daughter to play for him. How eminently proper that such a spirit should be wakened hence to begin new movement!

On the day of his death, it is reported that in the death of Brother Lewis, his wife and children have survived the loss of an affectionate husband and an ideal father, the Church a faithful and consistent Latter-day Saint and the cause a patriotic and benevolent member. While the crowded condition at the obsequies testifies to the high esteem in which he was held by his friends and relatives.

He it further reported that these relatives have turned the press for the publication of a suitable obituary until the bereaved have paid their respects to the deceased.

The officers are Samuel F. Walker, president; Edward H. Fife, vice-president; Martin E. Callahan, treasurer and general manager, and William V. Eberly, secretary. The headquarters of the company will be in Salt Lake.

WANT A FAIR IN HEAVEN.

"I am going to see the merchants of this city and see what we can do toward organizing a fair association," pleasantly replied Dr. Fennerman in response to a request for news, says the Beaver Church. "I believe we can organize such an institution in southern Utah, and keep it going. It is too far for me to go to Salt Lake each year, and besides that there will be a territorial fair this year. I cannot say anything about the details I would suggest, but would like the interview the business men now and then and talk something to say about the project."

Will send competent men to take down your stoves, store them, polish, repair and replace in the Fall cheaper than you can do it yourself. Our terms are reasonable.
