

YOUNG Newlywed slunk into the office late and slid into his chair so quietly no one noticed him come in. Finally he was discovered and answered the boys' hearty "welcome" with a painfully weak nod.

Newlywed's right eye was circled with black; his usually neatly tied tie—hand was away; his hands were signs of recent violent cleaning and there were bumps, bruises and cuts distributed plentifully over his countenance. Rubbing his assortment of sore spots tenderly he began, slowly and painfully, as if catching and feeling his way through the dark.

Their marriage has its flaws—and these are the greatest. Yes, I've been getting up—couch—a stove. We talked it over last night—phew! My wife said hit somebody. I laughed and sneered. Went to sleep in bliss—ful ignorance and was up early to get it done before I came back—oh, goodness! I ache boys, ache!

Hurried through breakfast and turned my attention to the stove. There it was; yes, there it was, all bright and shiny and new with five lengths of pipe—goodness gracious—there it was, just a little heater. At once I picked it up and moved with it to the sitting room.

Just to push my way through the sitting room and in back of me I stumbled over the coal scuttle, a coal scuttle which my wife likes cats to sit on. I picked it up and moved the stove getting a half—Norm and hammer held, hit me in the back stepped on my nose and then slipped me back into the coal scuttle. The cat that lovely? Yes, it was not—see this nose? The result.

Round Two—Grabbed the thing around the belt and got on my feet before the coal scuttle. It was torn and lying with me. I held my own and kicked Kid Heater into the corner where I longed to place a punch where it would hurt most, but knowing it would hurt me most, I didn't.

Round Three—Getting an elbow—across on its throat I forced it to the right corner, and after one of its feeble—ouch!—pinned down my shin down. It roared in off foot on my my tender corn. I got loose and we wrestled to the center of the floor board.

Round Four—Climbed up on a chair on top of the table and came down, hitting all the corners on the wall, meeting the floor on my neck. My wife unraveled me and I climbed up again. Started pulling the pipe together. First joint went on lovely, in coming on second, nipped a slice of the end of my finger.

Round Five—Debated whether to put four pipes together and join them to the hole in the wall by the fifth, or to put two on stove and two a hole and join. While debating, bowed my elbow against two already on the stove. They doubled up in the middle; so did I. I beat the pipe to earth. See this eye? The result.

Round Six—The third time I came down, I fell much in the same manner, but from a different cause. My wife and I couldn't agree why I came down this time. I contended she pulled the chair out from under me because it annoyed the kitten when I pulled off the table. She says I leaned over the fur. Well, whatever I did, I couldn't say how. The last time I fell from my perch, I took the count and came to with my wife holding a perfume bottle under my nose. I saw the violet garden around the little homestead down on the farm. I remembered it was a violet garden because I could smell them. And it was night because I saw stars.

Upon arising, spent the next two hours being bandaged and now here I am, as much of me as was spared from absolute destruction. Now, my wife is a lovely girl; don't misunderstand me, but just as I was about to bid her good-bye and tell her not to wear black on my account—just as I was getting up strength enough to die with loving words on my lips, you know—she gazed down at me and asked: "Did you fall?" Did I fall? Just like that you know, as if I might have walked down. I tried to be dignified, but the black smudge on my nose wouldn't let me. I went out to hire a man to put up the stove. Say, is there—oh, mamma!—any spot on the back of my neck? Take a tip boys from an experienced one: If you want anything done as you would have it done, hire someone to do it."

THE SONG HUCKSTER.

Will you buy? Will you buy? It's songs I sell. Songs of joy; songs of sorrow. Laugh today, we die tomorrow. Songs of every land and clime. Odes to winter, or spring time. Songs! Songs! Songs!

Songs for the old; songs for the young! Songs of a nation, by millions sung. A verse for the maid; a speech for the lad.

A drinking tune, or an epic sad; Some are witty; some are care worn; Some are war cries, some are love lorn; Will you buy? Will you buy? It's songs I sell.

MY MORNING MAIL.

Two letters are before me. A blurb and scented one; A kiss to you, dear sweetheart. To the flames cruel tailor's den.

MODERN MOTHER GOOSE.

Hi diddle diddle. The cat and the fiddle. The dish ran away with the spoon. The little dog laughed to see such fun. And the cow jumped over the moon. The beef trust took the tin in this. And that's the reason why. We who like a tender steak. Find beef so fiercely high.

LITTLE BOBBY KNEW.

A certain school teacher in Salt Lake explained the meaning of "expression" to her class. Then looking very pleasant, she asked the pupils, "Now what have I on my face?" Little Bobby, anxious to be seen and heard by the principal who was visiting, waved his hand as small children are taught to do to attract attention. "I know! I know!" he said, exclaiming in his eagerness to be called upon. He was.

"Now, Bobby, tell Mr. B— and all of us what I have on my face," said the teacher, still smiling sweetly. "Ho yure gotter mole!" said Bobby. He was kept in at recess.

THOSE GHILLS AGAIN.

Gert—I met Algy out at the lake towards the close of the season, but I pretended not to see him. He was.

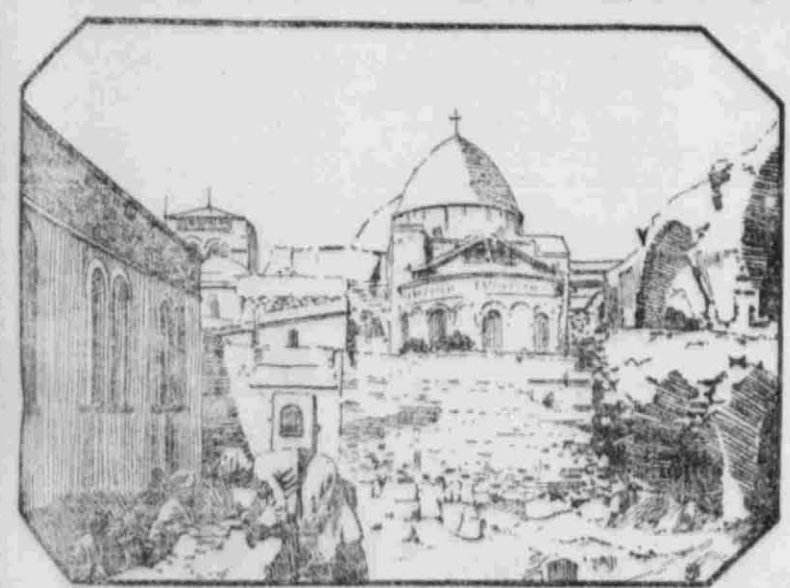

Gert—Well I do, rather, but I had on a red bathing suit, and he a bright horrid green outfit. The shades would have contrasted. He's not spoken to me since, but he should have shown better taste.

RECENTLY DISCOVERED WALL OF CONSTANTINE, JERUSALEM

The picture shows part of the newly brought to light wall of Constantine at Jerusalem, the result of a long series of excavations. This find is believed by those who are interested in such matters to be of great value in settling several disputed historical questions. The building in the background is the Church of the Holy Sepulcher.

FROM PRINCESS TO DUCHESS.

By the death of the late Duke of Pleiss, head of one of the richest and most ancient families in Silesia, his eldest son, Prince Henry, becomes duke and his beautiful English wife is now duchess instead of princess. The new duchess is the daughter of Colonel William Cornwallis West and the sister of the Duchess of Westminster.

If Women Only Knew.

What a Heap of Happiness it Would Bring to Salt Lake City Homes.

Hard to do housework with an aching back. Brings you hours of misery at leisure or at work.

If women only knew the cause—that backache pains come from sick kidneys.

"I would save much needless woe. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys."

Salt Lake City people endorse this: Mrs. H. M. Bismarck, living at 233 State St., Salt Lake City, Utah, says: "None of the remedy I tried did me any good until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. I suffered all the annoyances and inconveniences that come from kidney complaint for years. Learning of Doan's Kidney Pills I decided to use them and they quickly regulated the action of the kidneys, stopped the headache and dizziness at once and in every way proved to be just the remedy I needed. They do all, and I think more, than is claimed for them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
