In Woman's World

While the Woman's Revolution in this country has not seen its Yorktown and many martyrs and heroes have died in the weary years of discouragement and contest, still we are now well over the great decisive battles. None but the ignorant prate of the possible dangers of the vote in woman's hands. For over a quarter of a century women have had the full vote in a number of our states. Their governors, their legislators and their editors continually call upon the people of the other states to observe the great good results and to give the ballot to the mothers, the teachers, the wives who must needs use it to the advantage of their families, their homes and themselves. Colorado with its great educational system organized by a woman State Superintendent, Mrs. Greenleaf, leads the educational statistics of the nation. Wyoming points to empty jails and better and more humane laws. In many states they have gained the municipal vote, in nearly all the states the school vote. Two states will vote on the question of full suffrage this year.

Among the women who are doing most for this great cause now are Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, the president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, Jane Adams, Mrs. Ellen Henington, Mrs. Emmons Blaine, Mrs. Florence Kelley, Alice Stone Blackwell, Mrs. Clarence Mackay, Harriet May Mills, the brilliant Gordon sisters of New Orleans, Mrs. Ella Sease, State president of the State Association of Illinois, Mrs. Ella Hawley Crosscut, president of the New York State Association, Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton and Mrs. Rachel Foster Avery, national officers, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Johnson of Minnesota, Mary Garrett Hay and Lillie Devereux of New York, always Anna Shaw and always the greatest of living American women, Julia Ward Howe. From "Dreadnaughts" of the Woman's Battle," by Ada Davenport Kendall, in Norman E. Mack's National Monthly for November.

Miss Ida M. Tarbell's new historical serial begins in the November American Magazine. It is devoted to the history of "The American Woman." Miss Tarbell quotes the following letter written by Mrs. Mercy Otis Warren to one of these discontented young ladies of revolutionary days:

"The deficiency lies not much in the inferior texture of female intellects as in the different educational cultivation of the mind is neglected in either, we see ignorance, stupidity and ferocity of manners equally conspicuous in both."

"It is my opinion that that part of the human species who think nature as well as the infinitely wise and supreme author thereof has given them the superiority over the other, mistake their own happiness when they neglect the culture of reason in their daughters while they take all possible methods of improving it in their sons."

"The pride you feel on hearing reflections indiscriminately cast on the sex, is laudable if any is so—I take it, is a kind of conscious dignity that ought rather to be cherished, for while we own the appointed subordination (perhaps for the sake of order in families) let us by no means acknowledge such an inferiority as would check the ardor of our endeavors to equal in all accomplishments the most masculine heights, that when these temporary distinctions subside we may be equally qualified to taste the full draughts of knowledge and happiness prepared for the upright of every nation and sex; when virtue alone will be the test of rank and the grand economy for an eternal duration will be properly adjusted."

"Which stately paragraph Alice Brown, Mrs. Warren's biographer, who publishes the above letter, interprets charmingly:

"There speaks the feminine wisdom of the ages: 'My dear, it may be necessary for you to seem inferior; but you need not be so. Let them have their little game, since it may have been so willed. It won't hurt you; it will amuse them.'"

Women of vast wealth are always subjects of absorbing interest in these days. The December number of Human Life gives a most entertaining account of Mrs. H. H. Rogers, widow of the late Standard Oil magnate.

Mrs. Rogers owns no rare jewels or famous gems, although a world would have brought her the best. When she appears in public she is richly and painstakingly gowned, but with never a touch of the bizarre. When she entertains it is with elegance, but to small and selected parties.

She is particularly interested in wage-earning women. When the plan was launched to build City Federation hotels for girls who earned less than $7 a week, Mrs. Rogers was the first to subscribe.

Mrs. Rogers doesn't spend much of her time at Lenox, or even at her New York home, preferring the quiet of Fairhaven, with its home elegance. Her tastes are simple. She cares more for a walk in the yard of her home than a whirl up and down Fifth avenue.

To understand something about Mrs. Rogers one must know something about her late husband. Present-day history can point out no other man who had a sterner face at the office and a softer one at home. Back of this double life lies a cause. She is Mrs. H. H. Rogers. The Rogers home was palatial. But since mortal and mass cannot make a home, his Massachusetts mansion must have contained something else. It did—a woman. Until his death their married life was ideal. For the pure unselfishness and careful thoughtfulness of their love they had no equal.

The two enjoyed being alone together. They spent many hours engaging in light talk. Rogers had a keen sense of humor, and prided himself on his verbal cleverness. Mrs. Rogers is a woman seasoned with wit, and many were the little pleasantries they engaged in.

JUMPTUOUS EVENING WRAP OF VELVET BROCADE.

The opera vestibules and the foyer of the new theater, taken up con amore by the fashionables, have been a revelation this year in superb evening wraps. The straight, simple military cape of last season has been superseded by magnificent, draped garments, made of the richest fabric produced by the weaver's loom. Brocade velvet, with rose colored flowers on a mauve, was used for this luxurious wrap, the square collar being of gold lace, lined with violet velvet, and a heavy gold tassel giving a graceful line at the back.

D. C. Mr. Harold Smoot, who is laboring as a missionary in Europe, is expected to return home in time to spend Christmas.

Mrs. A. E. Jensen entertained a few friends at dinner Sunday in honor of her friend, Mrs. A. K. Nielson, who is visiting here from Springfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Allred entertained a number of their friends at their home in honor of Horace Studley, who left the next morning for New York, where he will reside. Mr. Studley has made his home in our city for a number of years as assistant forester, and through his efficient work he has been called to take charge of the office in Nepht. He leaves in Provo a large circle of friends who regret his leaving.

The Social Sixty gave a very enjoyable social and dancing party Wednesday evening at the First ward social hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Peay entertained at dinner Mr. and Mrs. Duffin, Mr. Phil Beesley and daughter, Misses Jennie and Maggie, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Stewart and Fred Evans.

About 30 friends and neighbors pleasantly surprised Mrs. W. H. Eggleston at her home Monday evening, the occasion being the lady's birthday. A very enjoyable evening of music and games was enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. James of Ogden were the guests of honor at a dinner party given in their honor by Mrs. James's mother, Mrs. James Gray.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Jensen had for their guests the first part of the week Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Jensen and Mrs. Frank Rous, all of Salt Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Graham have returned from Salt Lake, where they spent the Thanksgiving holiday with their daughter, Mrs. Ella Kempton.
