THE CRETAN TRUABLE.

The Turkish question is again important in European politics. All economic eyes are turned to the island of Crete, and a more serious crisis than they have been for many years, although the history of that island contains many blood-stained pages. The Christians, a great majority of whom are Greeks, are said to have rallied under the Greek flag and to be clamoring for union with the mother country, while the Greek fleet appears to be enroute to the island.

NAVY IN A STORM.

Judging from the reports of the hurricane encountered off Cape Hatteras by Admiral Dutton's fleet, the country narrowly escaped the loss of the flower of the navy; but the fact that all the vessels came through such a storm with no serious injury shows that they are really more seaworthy than formerly. Admiral Dutton's fleet was composed of the North Atlantic squadron, the most magnificent cruises and battleships in the navy, and any serious damage to it would have been a national disaster.
