The effect was startling. Inschoolrooms. The effect was startling. In-stead of returning to the building, in or-der the boys started games on the campus, while waiting for the usual bugle call. There was no bugle call because the of-ficer of the day was absent and nobody there told the bugler of the day to blow. Eventually the bunch of eighty, led by seniors, marched up town, bareheaded, and tramped up and down Main street yelling like Commanches. After an hour or more they returned to the school. Prin-cipal Eaton got the whole lot together, read them the riot act, and suspended ev-ery participant in the game until Monday morning. A Spicy Chapter in the Exciting Career Of Little Riter Ridges.

Riter, the 6-year-old son of Milton Ridges, residing at 423 west Third North, is in trouble again. Residents of the Twenty-second ward are getting superstitlous about that boythey affirm that he is destined for great things, possibly president of the United States, else why should he be snatched out of the jaws of death so often? Whenever there is a rumor around the ward that a boy has been badly hurt everybody at once says, "that's Riter Ridges." He occupies the same proud distiction in the Twenty-second ward as does little Ray Penrose in the Ninth ward. Among other exploits Riter has been run down by the Salt Lake & Ogden train and picked up for dead; he has fallen off the coal shed and out of trees, set himself on fire and been
