

AMONG MINING MEN.

A Utah Man Negotiates the Sale of Two California Properties.

A GOOD COPPER MINE WANTED.

Capitalists Are Eagerly Looking For Good-Taking Mines—The Stock Exchange—Bids and Offers.

Mr. C. E. Hudson, whom Monday morning, suddenly left for Denver, arrived there last evening, with the report that he had been the cause of the closing up of a deal, through which valuable mining properties in California had passed into the hands of a New York and London syndicate.

The properties sold consisted of a gold and a silver-lead deposit. One is located in Southern California and the other in the northern part of the state. The gold property was disposed of for $1,000,000, while the silver-lead property brought $200,000, making a transaction aggregating the sum of $1,200,000.

Regulations for the sale of these mines have been going on for some time past and the Messrs. Winslow and Hudson and J. H. Temple, of the gold property, were the mediators through which the selling part of the transaction was brought about. Mr. Temple left on Wednesday for California, his object being to verify the sale and turn over the property to the buyers, after which he will go up into Oregon and British Columbia.

In a conversation with Mr. Hudson today, he stated to the News that at present there was no speculation in the stock market, but that the market was good for mining properties. "Why," said he, "several people are the best kind of an investment, even with the present somewhat fluctuation of the market. A gold mine is always valuable, and if silver is in the coming campaign, and there is hardly a doubt that it will, then silver-lead properties will be worth more than they ever were."

"For sometime past," continued Mr. Hudson, "I have been in communication with an American millionaire, who is now in England and wants to make a purchase of good copper mines. I have submitted one proposition to him, but the property is not large enough, and would not be worth what I can get for my mine on one lot. If a good gold copper mine can be found, that gentleman will pay a handsome price for it. I am sure he has one I would like to him to negotiate with me."

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Fifty Shares of Daily Stock Sold in the Market.

The bulls and bears met on Monday morning, when three of the stocks responded to the calling of their names by exhibiting sales in the day's trading. Daily was the first stock to command particular attention and it closed at a price of $1.50. The stock brought $1.50 per share. This was a decline from the price of $1.75 which was the price of the stock when it was first offered. The price of the stock was $1.75 when it was first offered. The price of the stock was $1.75 when it was first offered.
