Have You a Home?

If not it will pay you to investigate the advantages of Forest Dale before buying elsewhere. We have our own water system; water piped in most durable cast iron pipe, and the ownership of the water, including the extension of the pipes past your door when purchasers in Forest Dale invite it are more than having the same in most cities. The advantage this affords will be readily seen, for the water belongs in the residents (each purchaser of a lot being allowed his proportion of the capital stock at the Forest Dale Water Company) and it rents with them to fix the water rates charged. The expense of running the system is very small and over the first expense of laying the mains is paid the rates need not be more than one-fourth those charged by Salt Lake City.

Have You Saved Anything?

Some people have been waiting for years for land to reach higher prices. In the meantime they have paid rent, and if they have made any improvements or done any work on their residences, the improvements have been yours, or the work done for their landlord. Many other people have built homes, and while those first mentioned have been "waiting for something to turn up," have paid for their property and now own the homes that shelters them.

Don't Get in Debt

unless you feel assured you can get out again. But if you have money saved, buy a home. If you have no income, buy a home. It pays to have an object in view, and there is no more worthy object than procuring a home for those dependent upon you.

My clerks, at room 232 Constitution Building, will give you prices and show you the property.

AN INDIAN GIVEN.

Recently Mr. J. D. Thomas, of North Dakota, visited the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia, and after carefully examining the country located in Winchester, he writes to Mr. V. B. Rogers, Land and Immigration Agent, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, Baltimore, Maryland, as follows: "If I were bent on seeing every state and territory of the United States, and was frank to say my opinion that this valley surpasses all other sections in the Union. The lands are low in price, and produce profitable crops. I thank you for directing me here, and should those seeking pleasant and profitable homes in search of the same."

DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Monday, July 23, 1894.

BOOKED OF HIS MONEY.

A Stranger's Story of How He Lost His Cash at Fort Hughes.

Edward H. —— is the name of a young fellow from San Francisco who arrived here on Saturday and who is 20 pounds of sightseeing poorer by morning reached Fort Hughes over the street car lines running from this city.

He sauntered through the shady groves of the fort and got fabulously rich on the immense variety and city sense, and finally took a seat on one of the benches at the entrance of the main post photographs at the invasion of the Forty Thieves. Then almost any train. As he sat there they were with his thoughts, he declares that two citizens were approached him and began a pleasant conversation which very naturally brought to an end by striking him and mentioning a match at the nothing. He claims that he struggled hard to restrain himself, cried vociferously for assistance when a third man flashed in the scene preventing total he was an officer. It is further claimed that he became a target at pulling the latter down under street by fighting. He held on to Holster and refused him of a bag of gold containing $40 which was saved to his relief. Holster offered a constable to depart down the latter towards the city which they did in a hurry. Then the bogus officer let go of Holster and joined him pals.

The victim of the robbery reported his experience at the police station and the officers have been on the look out for the robbers but have not succeeded as yet in finding them.

TWO SIMILAR ACCIDENTS.

A Couple of Small Boys Break Their Right Arms.

The five-year-old son of J. W. Foster, who lives on Second North street, west, had the misfortune while romping with playmates to fall and break his right arm. The lad was taken to the office of Dr. A. K. Smith, where the broken limb was set and put in splints.

Shortly afterward Frank Janney's little boy, who had met with a similar accident while climbing a tree, was brought in for treatment. His right arm was badly fractured near the elbow. The injured member was also repaired and the boy sent home with his bandaged arm in a sling.

CUTTING LUCERN.

An Interesting Bulletin on that Work by the Utah Experiment Station.

Utah Experiment Station bulletin, No. 32, just issued, reports experiments as to the time of cutting lucern and on watering. As to the proper time for cutting lucern, the results given are timely and interesting. It is shown that whether cut twice or thrice, the yield is practically the same. The weights are given for each cutting, also the dates of cutting. The principal feature of the trial, however, was the testing of plants to find the relative feeding value of lucern cut at different degrees of ripeness. The first cutting was before the lucern came into bloom, the second cut in early bloom, and third cut promptly out of bloom. In the feeding trial the "early cut" lucern gave a gain per day per steer of .778 pound; "medium cut," .754, and "late cut," .525. On the service crop, "early cut" gave gain of .787; "medium cut," .751, and "late cut," .653. Taking the average of the first and second crops, it is seen that early cutting gave decidedly the best results. It is believed, however, that sometimes one should be suspended until further experiments verify the results of this trial. The lucern is in every way a valuable crop.

1. Early cut lucern gave a greater gain than late cut lucern.

2. As large a crop was received from two cuttings as from three, whether the first cutting was at an early period or at a medium period of its growth.

3. As early cut hay gave a slightly better gain, the balance of the experiment favors early cutting.

4. It is assumed, not known, that the character of the growth from early-cut lucern would not be as unfavorable as to the late cut.

In the watering trial, reported in the same bulletin, no good results are shown to come from watering. In fact, there is a decrease in yield shown in almost every instance where water was applied. The statement is made that the trial was conducted on a very poor piece of ground, and that it will be transferred to a more favorable piece of the farm.

Utah Experiment Station bulletin No. 33, also just received, is entitled "Soils and plants of farm crops." The weights of tons of oats, wheat, corn, potatoes, timothy, barley, wheat, at each inch of depth down to seven inches, are given, and then the total weights of the twelve inches. A very accurate method was pursued in gathering the roots. The soil was a sandy loam, upper layer, and several feet deep at the point tried to the succeeding stony subsoil. Eleven tons gravel.

The same bulletin contains a table showing the number of stalks and plants per acre and square feet taken from four pieces averaged, the crops being oats, timothy, spring wheat, field corn and clover. The bulletin is interesting and valuable for reference.

B. Y. A. Summer School.

Provo, Utah, July 21.—An informal session was held today, and quite a number of the classes were in session.

Domestic Science—W. E. Rydalch B. Phy.—The instructor gave his class a lesson on "A Candle" from a scientific standpoint.

Prof. Weihl took his class in botany into the hills, and after gathering a variety of flowers they took their seats in the shade while the professor illustrated portions of stamp, tubular and irregular. Next, Prof. Weihl in the most delicate beauties of the pistil became visible, and a knowledge of their uses enhanced the interest with which they were viewed. The class was so fortunate as to find some very fine specimens of the genus Delphinium, species exigua, and native of the belt of country from Wyoming and Texas to the slope of the North Nevada mountains.

BATES.

Commented by Prof. Weihl—Tele is not a native class, but the students are beginners. Pro. Whitely did not have up a fuller grounder and any of the usual elementary work, but yet seem as able to reading Caesar. They pursued slowly and examined the etymological construction of the words, built up the grammatical framework as declensions and conjugations, and compare them with the corresponding terms in English and other tongues. This is the sincere inductive method, and Prof. Weihl is confident the Utah class will, in the short term, complete the first books of Caesar. And through them gain at once an understanding of the structure of the Latin language that practically they will have acquired the language.

GRAMMAR.

Prof. M. L. Nelson—The lesson today related to specific forms and uses of words. To say "I am real glad" is committing a grammatical error—using an adjective instead of an adverb. To say "I am really glad" is committing a rhetorical error unless the question has been raised affecting the reality of the gladness. Usually, the aim of such an adverb is to insensify the meaning of the adjective, and thus really does not do. "Very" or "quite" would be the right word to intensify the meaning of "glad." The simple, positive, unmodified expression "I am glad to see you, Pat," is far better than awkward exaggeration.

The professor extended the use of "friendly" as an adverb as well as an adjective—as "He treated me very friendly." The word "good" is "well," and for a host of other words and "rules" for them. "Excellent," and many others, are a glorious cause of "poverty," not only in expression of thought but in thought itself, they obliterate the power of fine discrimination.

Speaking of such words as "among" and "amongst," "between" and "betwixt," the teacher said when uniforms are allowable, good taste would lead us to choose the shorter and simpler.

NOTES.

Final examination took place this morning in parliamentary law, in the commercial college department of the university, under professor J. R. Meeker. It was very satisfactory, a large majority passing with high honors.

Review in the civil government class (same department) also took place covering the ground of the state government.

PATRIOTISM IN PAROWAN.

All Parties Rejoice in the Enactment of the Utah Bill.

Parowan, July 19, 1894.—On the afternoon of the 17th inst., when the thrilling message arrived in Parowan stating that President Cleveland had signed the bill for the admission of Utah into the union of the United States, the joy of the people seemed to be unbounded. Canvassing was kept up for two full hours, and everybody congratulated his neighbor on the glorious news. A committee was selected and a mass meeting appointed for the following evening (last night), at which ten speakers addressed the people, Pres. Dunkerlin and Bro. Richardson. The burden of their remarks was gratitude to Congress and the President of the United States, believing we would prove to the nation they had made no mistake in admitting us and that they would yet be proud of us; and further, we trusted that the kindest hopes of our friends throughout the country concerning us would yet be more than realized. The meeting was interspersed with patriotic songs (lately rendered) and music from our quadrille band. At the close of the meeting a Republican arose and proposed three cheers for Joseph L. Rawlins, our delegate, and all others who had helped in any way to bring to pass the consummation of statehood for Utah. The proposition was seconded and three rousing cheers were given, after which the meeting dispersed in the very best of good humor and good will.

AN ELDER'S REPORT.

Good Success in His Mission—Narrow Escape on the Homeward Journey.

Holbrookville, Arizona,
July 15, 1894.

Editor Deseret News:

I have just returned (on the 15th inst.) from a mission to the Southern States, and hereby report by letter.

I left home (Springville, Arizona) on April 11th, 1893, and went directly to Boerne, Texas, for the purpose of visiting relatives, which privilege had been granted me. There I met Elder A. V. Greer, from this place, who was on a visiting mission to his relatives in Texas. Together we labored near Boerne till May 12th, holding a number of meetings and a debate with a Campbellite minister, and created quite a stir amongst the people. I baptized two children and two sisters there, and, thanks to the Heavenly Father, they are still in the Gospel today and are good, faithful members.

From Boerne we went to Kippen, Texas, and stayed with Brother Greer's relatives about a week, held two meetings, one, we think, a good impression. We did more on May 19th and 20th, 3 miles from Kippen and 7 to 10 miles to the Guadalupe River, which I did three days later and was assigned to labor in Mississippi.

My labors in that state were fraught with pleasure and success. A fair record of the people of the Bayou state treated the Elders with kindness. As a rule they were very hospitable and charged them no late many warm friends who have never embraced the Gospel.

On April 7th, 1893, I was appointed Secretary of Elder C. A. Farley as president of the conference, which position I filled till released to return home April 21st, 1894.

I enjoyed the spirit of my mission, and, with the exception of a brief spell of illness had good health during my absence from home. During the last year of my labors I traveled and wrote about 800 miles, walked 2,147 miles, helped to hold eight-day meetings and officiated or assisted in baptizing thirty-three souls. As my relatives, mother, a sister and three brothers were intending to start to return to Zion about the time of my release, I came by and have helped them out. We came by wagon, starting from Bisbee, Texas, May 23rd and reached here, as stated above, on July 15th. The distance is nearly a thousand miles and has been a hard and toilsome journey, that of the country traversed ever was extremely dry and barren and south of the water was strongly impregnated with alkali or gypsum. In fording the Pecos river at Roswell, New Mexico, we had the misfortune to get our sack overturned while in it and all the contents were lost. My brother Lee and I were in it at the time and we saved the horses with difficulty on account of the quicksand and mad current, and narrowly escaped drowning ourselves.

The Lord has indeed blessed me through all my labors and travels. I realize in having been privileged to assist my mother and family back to Zion.

IN PIUTE COUNTY.

Rising Agricultural and Industrial Notes by a Widow who "Travels."

Kingston, Piute Co., Utah, July 20.—There are about twelve men employed in the mines at Marysvale, yet there are a goodly number of prospectors working for themselves. Several new leads are reported and many of the older claims show up bodies of ore that are quite encouraging to their owners. The Mt. Baldy district is developing some fine mines. The Bowker mine is still being operated and the mill runs, they claim, is paying. A new vein of ore was struck in the Satellite mine that is proving a surprise to its owners. The Annie Laurie mill is expected to start up on the 25th of next month. They have a large body of ore ready for it. The Butler mine is reported showing up well and the owners think they have a fortune to it. They talk of incorporating this property and erecting a mill to work its products.

The hops have produced fruits in portions of the county that have destroyed some of the earliest and earliest destroyed on to the meadows. This is something new for this district and people are beginning to see what to do to prevent the recurrence. The hay crop is excellent, but the frequent showers prevent the successful carrying of the crop. There is more water in the river than a month ago, as those used to say, a day in July, and no necessity for water quarrels or vexatious or burdensome law suits. More land is under cultivation than ever before and crops look prosperous. The people are hopeful that the markets will improve, but at present the prospects are not encouraging. Considerable cheese is being produced in this county of a good quality, which is to be tried and will find a ready sale.

R. Kingston woolen mills have not yet started up this season, but it is anticipated they will begin operations soon. There is a good roller mill at Kingston which is a great help to the district. The new meeting house is up in the square and some of the rafters are in place. It will be a credit to the place and a source of pleasure to the Saints when completed, which should be soon, as it is needed.

The Deseret News is much appreciated. One good lady said that she had five of her neighbors in sorrow her paper before she could read it.
