ARE WE DOING RIGHTLY IN UTAH.

The mode of dealing with the Mormon peculiar institution, which the government has adopted and is now practicing, is an unpleasant instance of how laws may be wrested and perverted from their original intent, and how gross injustice may be done in the endeavor to conquer an established state of society by applying to it the legal standard of a morality it does not accept. Abhor the custom of polygamy as much as we may; denounce its originators, upholders and practitioners; call it systematized adultery; stigmatize the people who consider it a part of religion, as sensual and ignorant; yet there it is—a fact. Above forty years ago this sect had its petty beginning; a quarter of a century ago its members founded in a desert their community. They have made it thriving and vigorous. During this time, and until within a few years, polygamy grew from rare into frequent occurrence, though by no means in proportion to the great increase of population. Families, the result of these "plural marriages" (as they themselves term them), have been formed and filled with children, now all the way from babyhood to young manhood and womanhood, in the due course of nature.

Now comes the stern hand of law to repress this oriental institution, with its bold insult to the spirit of the age and the moral sense of the nation; finds a statute against adultery enacted by the Mormons themselves, and the most stringent one, we are told, existing anywhere; turns it upon "plural marriage," which under their law is not adultery, but just as truly honorable matrimony as the monogamic union of the Christian world; and packs the juries who are to try the polygamists arrested under this statute, to insure conviction. What conviction means in any of these cases, is the branding of one or two or more honest women, the subsequent wives of a polygamist, as mere concubines; and the casting upon the children of such wives the stigma of illegitimacy. Is not this case hard? and is this treatment just?

The undiscriminating will perhaps accuse us of apologizing for the peculiar institution in presenting the issue in this light. We intend nothing of the sort. But the mode of warfare against it which we have above described is obnoxious to every instinct of honor and fairness. There is a better way of solving the problem. * * *

Prosecutions, of the sort now in the Utah courts, are simply persecutions. Nothing can come of them but the satisfaction of revenge, unless, indeed, they shall have the not unprecedented effect of renewing the life of Mormonism, impelling a new hegra, and founding still another Zion in another wilderness,—and there are of course many floating rumors that such will be the fact.—Albany Evening Times.

U. S. MARSHAL PATRICK.

Our Mormon neighbors seem to regard Marshal Patrick with as much good will as his position of executive officer of such a court as McKean's will allow. They consider good-natured "Mat" a sort of jolly joke on the court whose mandates he is called on to execute, and he is referred to always by the Mormon papers in the most courteous manner as "the gentlemanly U. S. Marshal," and in other phrases of similar import. The Marshal's gentleness is almost as remarkable as his vigor. It is a noticeable fact that whenever an obstreperous Mormon requires knocking down, the considerate Marshal delegates that muscular duty to one of his deputies. This is not due to any want of ability or pluck on his part, but rather to his good nature, which never forsakes him even in the most trying emergencies.

Marshal Patrick has secured the good will of the Mormon leaders and people under circumstances which those who do not know how readily touched those leaders and people are by kindness can with difficulty appreciate. We noticed this when in Salt Lake with great pleasure.—Omaha Herald.

DON'T FEAR IT.—The editor of the Omaha Herald thus fearlessly defies his calumniators—

"It is vain for people to suppose that we have the slightest fear of the odium which is sought to be attached to our denunciations of the Federal persecutors of the Mormon leaders and sectaries, and of our pleas in behalf of right and justice to the people of Utah, by the falsehood that we either apologize for, or have the least sympathy with, either the Mormon system of religion, or with polygamy, which is its most offensive feature."
