elastic limit, however small the degree, the metal will become fatigued, and unless relieved, becomes will break sooner or later.

The former argues that a place of machinery is strained, but not broken, will recover its elasticity by rest. This has been demonstrated by many experiments, but it takes a considerable time to recuperate. Bars of iron and steel, strained to a yielding point beyond the elastic limit, and so weakened thereby, if they were tested again the following day they would take somewhat of one-half of their former load weight. It is allowed to rest for about two years, but does not seem to have recovered their original elastic limit of strength, but is more extended than before. In the direction of metal fatigue, it is evident that the restoration of strength was far from complete.

The analogy between the condition of overstrained muscles and overstrained parts of machinery seems to be perfect enough to enable us to understand the fact that whereas latter become tired and weak, and also that they may become hardened by frequent and violent training.

DISSIMILAR PROPHETS.

The number of those who make dissimilar predictions of events or calamities seems to be mounting on the earth and increased greatly during the past few years, until now some name is legion. This suggestion is made without reference to those in the religious service, who foretell various changes in the weather, and among whom an examination is in progress at Washington, with the view of the part of the government of cultivating and developing the prophetic qualities among part of its employes. These in mind include those who, having received an education in theological studies in secular institutions of learning, are making the intermission obtained from these studies regarding earthquakes, tidal waves, etc., under the name that they are the result of scientific investigation.

It is but a few weeks since six of these scientific disaster prophets made the prediction that on the 16th inst., or Thursday next, the city of New York would be the scene of a great seismic disturbance. The catastrophe is to be very destructive in its effects, but while the Gathamites are to be terribly shaken, the inhabitants of their city are to remain but little affected. It is said that some of the predictions made from this source have been literally fulfilled, therefore we accept this as evidence of the market prophet's power, even if the inspiration of the Almighty and act subjects to no examination of figuring and cold calculation.

are heralded abroad as evidence of their ability, while the vastly greater number of their prophecies which fail are but eight. It is in fact an easy matter for a shrewd and virtuously well informed person to make a good record as a prophet so far as any of these alleged scientific "prophets." It is a knowledge common to everybody that three days of great anxiety and disturbance on the part of the earth and its depths, for instance, the practice nature of these calamities and disasters, as, an earthquake, by those who actually possessed the gift of prophecy, has two parts of knowledge. The first tells the story, and says that in the last days all these things will come to pass. It is an attempt to determine from Holy Writ that the conditions which exist today are identical with those which characterized the period of time described as "the last days." Taking the present thus interpreted, and the further fact of the nature of events which are to transpire, it is no time to be a string of dates, but epithets, local names, and situations, and at least a few of them, pretty near correct, to the wonderment of people who have not given the matter deep thought. And to add a final interest to the affair is to take up a prediction, for instance one commonly repeated during the past year, that New York ultimately will sink into the sea, and to study a date for the event, as a matter of guess-work. Then a failure can be attributed to a "change of estimate" or "mistakes in calculations," while a lucky guess or a prediction is cited as absolute proof of the maker's qualifications.

These scientific disaster prophets are by no means entitled to the credit that is given them by many people. At best, they are merely trying to "read the thunder" of more worthy persons who actually are indicated by the divine spirit of prophecy, gives through the inspiration of the Almighty and act subjects to no examination of figuring and cold calculation.

FLIPPING PHRASES.

An official return of the case of official flipping of presidents in February 1893 has just been issued. This class of punishment is under a new name to 1893. During the past eighteen years there have been 220 flippings. The maximum number to any one year was in 1893, where there were 50 cases. With the exception of two for gambling, all the presidents are to blame in this class of offense. The majority of them are to be considered as acts of robbery, assault or assault with intent to rob. Of the 220 cases, 209 were in London and Liverpool, 12 being removed from the central criminal court, 117 from the Liverpool sessions, 22 from the Manchester and 21 from the Lancashire sessions. Yorkshire had 15 cases during the period covered by the report, Nottingham 12, Derby 10 and Cheshire nine. The majority of the criminals were men over 20 years of age. In the entire list there were only seven youths under 17 years old.

It is shown by comparative tables to the report that the infliction of the punishment in various cases of assault and robbery had a direct tendency to reduce offenses of that nature. During the new year preceding 1893 it had been customary to inflict a sentence of this class only, but in 1892 there was a reversal of the use of the royal edict, with 1892 great falling off in the extent of offense in the case to which it was directed. This is taken as proof that the thieves who commit such offenses do not fear the severity of the punishment, but consider that the law will not touch them.
