

FACTS AND FICTION

Experiences of Salt Lake City Citizens Are Easily Proven to Be Facts.

The most superficial investigation will prove that the following statement from a resident of Salt Lake is true. Read it and compare evidence from Salt Lake City people with testimony of strangers living so far away you can not investigate the facts of the case. Many more citizens of Salt Lake City will endorse our claims.

Alfred Clark, blacksmith, of 136 south Main St., says: "While working, I always feared that twinges of pain would catch me and cling to me during the day and night. Many a time I have had to lie just in one position in order to have any comfort or to enjoy half a decent night's rest. This is not a pleasant condition to be in for a man performing even the most trivial act around his workshop has twinges in the small of his back which almost makes him exclaim, 'neither is it pleasant to arise morning after morning very poorly prepared to commence another hard day's work. A sure indication that my kidneys were at the bottom of the whole disturbance was the action and condition of the kidney secretions. Something about an advertisement wherein it stated that Doan's Kidney Pills could be depended upon in such cases induced me to go to the F. J. Hill Drug Co.'s store for a box. It is difficult to understand how a simple little pill could have had such effect upon the action of the kidney secretions and could have stopped the backache, but it is a positive fact that the treatment did. I very emphatically endorse Doan's Kidney Pills."

HARRIMAN OBSCURE.

Treated Refuse in the J. J. O'Leary Case With Contempt.

New York, Oct. 5.—E. H. Harriman and Jacob H. Schiff appeared as witnesses before a referee today in the suit of J. J. O'Leary of Chicago against a New York broker for $50,000 losses in dealings in Northern Pacific in May, last.

Mr. Harriman said he could not remember how much Northern Pacific stock he had about May 9, 1901. He refused to reply to questions as to whether or not he was concerned in any way in trying to gain control of the Northern Pacific road.

"Why won't you answer these questions?" he was asked.

"I don't want to," replied Mr. Harriman.

Mr. Harriman said he was present at the conference with Mr. Steele, Mr. Schiff and others on May 31 when it was decided to allow Mr. Morgan to name a new board of directors for the Northern Pacific road. He said this conference was held for the purpose of allaying misapprehensions concerning the affairs of the road.

Mr. Harriman refused to answer questions as to whether or not he sold Northern Pacific stock to the Northern Securities company.

He said that at the present he was a director in the Northern Pacific road but he did not remember whether he was one of the directors named by Mr. Morgan in May, 1901.

Mr. Schiff said that prior to May 9 the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. had purchased Northern Pacific stock on the New York stock exchange, but he declined to say how much was purchased. He declined to state whether Kuhn, Loeb & Co. had sold Northern Pacific stock to the Northern Securities company at the time of the formation of the latter company. His firm, he said, would have been willing to pay more than $100 a share for Northern Pacific stock on May 9 had there been any for sale.

Senator Fairbanks presented the claims of his party to the support of the people because of its record as a business organization. "The Republican party," he said, "is harmonious. There is no conflict of sentiment, either as to our measures or with respect to the candidate for the presidency. Republican triumph will assure the country that the administration of public affairs will not be embarrassed by warring factions."

"No president can successfully administer the government who does not have back of him the loyal and intelligent support of a great party fitted to govern; no president is wise and able enough to proceed without the cordial and united support of his party assigned to the country a successful administration who has the intelligent and united support of a great party."

The opposition is composed of disinterested elements. It is sharply divided upon important issues, and its leadership is not supported with entire unanimity. Republican triumph will thoroughly dedicate to the support of the great department of the government will be in control of men skilled in the administration of public affairs, and who will co-operate in the advancement of the country to the fullest possible degree in the ways of peace and

San Francisco, Oct. 6.—The schooner Neptune arrived from the Marshall Islands, in mid-Pacific and brought news of the death of Murrell, grand chief of a district comprising most of the islands of the group. The chief ruler was 80 years of age when he died, some weeks ago, after a lingering illness, and his death and the subsequent obsequies were the occasion of a great display on the part of the natives. For weeks prior to the death of Murrell the natives began assembling at his island home. When he died all the Marshall Islanders went into mourning and gave vent to their grief in a weird and old-fashioned manner. The ceremonies continued for several days.

SENATOR FAIRBANKS TALKS TO NEVADANS

Vice Presidential Candidate Urged Them to Return to the Republican Fold.

DISCUSSED NEWLANDS LAW.

He Said Credit for Its Passage Was Due Entirely to Pres. Roosevelt and His Party.

Reno, Nev., Oct. 5.—Senator Fairbanks and Fulton spoke today in the Senate chamber of Nevada, Reno, Carson and Virginia. At Truckee, on the morning of the 7th, at 7 o'clock, the morning, the party bade adieu to the state of California and to the people of the three Pacific coast states. The stop was made at Truckee before breakfast, but no formal speech was made. This was due to a mistake in announcing the meeting for the evening instead of the morning. There were, however, a number of men at the railroad station, when the train pulled out, and these the senator greeted with a hearty handshake. In a few informal words he expressed his appreciation of the hospitality that had been everywhere on the trip extended to him.

Reaching Reno early this morning, he proceeded to the other two places, making here for the night meeting.

At Virginia the senators were driven about in four-horse carriages and given a general view of the points of interest. Both at Carson and Virginia they were cordially greeted and their remarks liberally applauded.

In all their speeches they urged the return of Nevada to the Republican fold and dwelt upon the capacity of that party to maintain prosperity in that state. "When the workers in these mines come to reflect," said Senator Fairbanks at Virginia, "I am sure they will reach the conclusion that there is more prosperity for them under Republican policies than under any other political party."

Speaking for the support of the Republican party by the state, Senator Fairbanks said: "I have traveled from the Atlantic to the Pacific. I have been in the New England states, in the northern Rocky mountain region, in the Mississippi valley and have seen many of my countrymen, and I bring it to you as my deliberate judgment that the people of the United States have already determined in their hearts to support Theodore Roosevelt in the presidency for the next four years to come."

Discussing at the same place the question of irrigation, Senator Fairbanks made reference to the fact that the Democratic party had in its platform laid claim to the patriarchy of the existing reclamation statute and had designated it as the "Newlands law."

The claim, he pronounced to be without foundation, because, he continued, the credit for that most important legislation, "That bill was recommended by a Republican president and passed into law by a Republican Congress."

And yet the Democratic party takes upon itself all the credit and calls it the Newlands law. I esteem Senator Newlands very highly and in view of the facts in the case I cannot believe his name was coupled with this great measure with his knowledge and consent. The Republican party is not brought to the straight of borrowing credit where it is not due, but on the other hand, we do not mean to yield our rights in this important point to any other party. The statement was received with applause.

In his speeches at Carson and Virginia City, Senator Fulton took William J. Bryan to task for recent speeches, declaring that he had sought to revive the race question and to stir up strife between labor and capital. He defended the Republican party as the best friends the laboring element ever had.

Just as he was about to take the train from Carson Senator Fairbanks was presented with an elaborately carved silver and horn cane by L. H. Rogers of the local Roosevelt club.

In this city tonight the senators addressed all the people who could crowd into the Grand theater and the demand for admittance made it evident that a much larger hall could have been filled. The meeting was marked by a high degree of enthusiasm and the applause was frequent and pronounced. Except Justice Massey presided. The addresses were given in a general way and again the people of this state were urged to give their support to the Republican party as best calculated to promote the state's interests.

Senator Fairbanks presented the claims of his party to the support of the people because of its record as a business organization. "The Republican party," he said, "is harmonious. There is no conflict of sentiment, either as to our measures or with respect to the candidate for the presidency. Republican triumph will assure the country that the administration of public affairs will not be embarrassed by warring factions."

"No president can successfully administer the government who does not have back of him the loyal and intelligent support of a great party fitted to govern; no president is wise and able enough to proceed without the cordial and united support of his party assigned to the country a successful administration who has the intelligent and united support of a great party."
