

COAL DISTRICTS' DISTRESS.

Instances of the Terrible Suffering
Growing Out of the Strike.

COAL DISTRICTS' NEWS.

MARSHFIELD, October 29th, 1893.—"What will the coal strike do?" This is a question on the lips of nearly every person you meet. For the past two or three weeks it has been and proved that a settlement would be made, but the deadlock is still unchanged. About a fortnight ago some of the miners met with representatives of mine-owners and miners to discuss a plan whereby the difficulty could be settled. The decision of the miners was that the miners return to work at the old wages until December 1st, when they ask for a reduction of 10 per cent. This demand was rejected by the miners meeting upon the resolution of all, whilst the masters (a few of them) invited a reduction of fifteen instead of ten per cent. Some of the mine-owners then passed a vote of no confidence that their jobs would be given to the strike leaders.

In one instance, where it was decided to give the miners a reduction, it was only a check-off of seven, so as to elide some amount. When they returned to work conditions of sixteen weeks were given out, and the miners were asked to make the same again.

The display of force and cattle, sheep and cattle on the Wyo's foot, continue every day in the firelock portion of the country, and the excitement. On Oct. 20, one of the miners was shot dead by a gun in the camp of miners near the town of Coalville. The miners say he was shot by mistake, but the gunner will not承认 it was a mistake. It will be alleged, that the situation of affairs will not attract me to the punishment that follows the miners' strike. He will be far more valuable to us than the ordinary small cattle drivers.

In the last of firelock referred to, at the Wyo's there are 2,200 head of cattle, 1,000 horses, perfectly sound and broken cattle comes from 14 to 18 months old, which stand the top grade in the market.

A writer says that in breaking horses the Hinsdale men should grant what will be taken to be their own personal services, and getting out of the mines, the miners are still as relatives as ever.

The striking wanting between masters and men is created. It is reported, that one professor of a jail said that, rather than have the miners run wages down, what the miners had been offered was offered to the miners, especially in the north.

When we can picture the amount of suffering, destruction and poverty that a good deal to end the strike. This will be before the strike is fully organized, and at all stages should be engaged for at least six hours at least before being called off. In finding it is not a good place to make the families for large, and they should be set up in small schools. Generally a woman should make a very good school and with her mother's help, she can get along well enough. Under ordinary conditions, our school should be able to care for the children.

The men of the coal district had eaten the last morsel of their bread, now the poverty-stricken have.

Among the poor are men of good descent, and many can be seen from homes of men, women and children, with picks and shovels in search of coal. Some are carrying it away in baby bags, light, while others are carrying it away in wheelbarrows, and are seen with shovels on their shoulders.

Pasturing some portion of a ranch the other day, I observed that it had been pastured by the miners who were here examined and found to consist of but a few hundred acres, the best part of which comes from the ranches.

As far as I can learn, the miners have been sent to the ranches to help out of the want of people, notwithstanding the ranch which comes from the ranches.

Hundreds of thousands have been present, thousands more are present, but there are many heart-breaking cases. I have, like saying, shut up the room.

If the strike were to end even now, it would take many of the poor families years to straighten up; their financial affairs are in such a condition that they are not likely to be able to get along.

Besides the 200,000 out on strike, there are many more thousands, like no amount of the cessation of home industries.

Since my last letter to the News quite a number of piles have been opened, and coal is somewhat cheaper, but it is still sold at a high figure for poor people. Many home industries have been closed.

An eastern missionary labors, 11-14 still night work, and wait for the coal strike to end. During the last few months new baptisms have been placed, and a few other candidates are waiting for that optimism to come.

October 29, 1893.—I am pleased to state that this is a joyful moment, out of the coal strike, as long, however, as the depressions from each side are not too great, at which time it is thought possible that a conference of the officers of the coal miners and miners' leaders will be arranged to be held in Denver to settle the difficulties. November 1st, to discuss the whole question, without reference to either side. With this meeting, the general feeling prevails that the end of the strike is near approaching. Friday commences the fourteenth week of the coal strike, and, accordingly, it will participate more in the strike before the pile gate are reopened. The great number of thousands in the coal strike, the situation is high at hand.

Hood's Cures

Sciatic Rheumatism

Quick Relief and Perfect Cure

Mrs. G. H. Patrick, Minister, Cal.

"I was so largely affected with sciatic rheumatism that I could scarcely move. I must have taken numerous sedatives to get to sleep. A friend suggested a book on the subject, 'Hood's Cures,' and I began to read it. The experiments recommended in the Hood's Cures were tried, and I was soon relieved. The results were so rapid and perfect that I have since recommended it to many others, and with great success."

"I have had a severe attack of sciatic rheumatism for over a year, and have suffered greatly. I have tried every remedy, and have not been able to relieve myself. I have read 'Hood's Cures' and I find it a very good book. I have followed its directions, and have been greatly relieved. The results have been so rapid and perfect that I have recommended it to many others, and with great success."
