SAW THE CHICAGO HORROR.

Proprietor Wey of the Wilson Returns And Tells of Fire.

"I do not believe that Chicago realizes even now the full extent of the horrors," declared A. Fred Wey, proprietor of the Wilson hotel, upon his return from the east last evening. Mr. Wey was within a few blocks of the theater when the disaster occurred, and going to the scene, he watched the various stages of the catastrophe.

"The story has not been exaggerated in the least," said Mr. Wey. "The sights I witnessed there as an outside spectator no tongue can describe. It was nearly two hours, mind you, after the alarm of fire, that the town seemed to realize that a calamity had befallen. I walked to the theater because the fire apparatus was going in that direction, and I happened to have a car with me. When I got there, 20 minutes after the beginning, there was no excitement, no crowd at all and things seemed in such regular order that I returned to the hotel. A half hour or more after that, it was rumored that several lives had been lost. I again went to the theater, but the crowd was so dense, although ambulances were on the scene, finally, the report got out that the death toll would run into the hundreds, and the horrible sights of that afternoon, and evening are not soon to be forgotten. People in the crowd seemed to lose their minds entirely. They began to fight their way back in vain. An unbroken line of dead bodies extended from the entrance to the stage, and the bodies of the women and children, and their bodies had been stripped in a majority of cases of every vestige of clothing, and were horribly mutilated."

ROSE WRITES POETRY.

Wife Murderer Takes to Compiling Verses to Pass the Time.

Frank Rose, the murderer, is now busying himself with writing poetry in the county jail, and if his composition is original, it is a pretty fair specimen of versification. The following is a sample:

We none of us know one another,
And oft into error we fall;
So let us speak well of our brother,
Or speak not about him at all.

Leave base minds to harbor suspicion,
And small ones to trace out defects;
For base is the mind that suspects.

Rose claims that the above is all his own, and that in the past he has written considerable, but never made any attempt to have it published. He also claims that he is not losing his nerve, and never will, no matter what happens. Rose says he has not communicated with any of his father's friends, and doesn't intend to.

Chief Lynch received word yesterday from Mrs. Elizabeth Morris at Bonne Terre, Mo., mother of Mrs. Rose, asking that her daughter's body be buried here at 3 p. m., as a sign of respect. Mrs. Rose's chaplain, Mrs. Morris also asked for the funeral of the child, and for such of the dead woman's effects as may have been preserved. She gave the information that whiskey had been the bane of the daughter's married life and caused most of the trouble between the woman and her husband.

Mrs. Richard W. Young left last week for a visit to Honolulu, where she goes in search of health and rest. While there she will be the guest of Major Young's sister, Mrs. Millie Schweitzer, who is a resident of Honolulu.

Among the larger receptions of yesterday was that at the home of Mrs. Perry Heath, the hostess being assisted by Mrs. Thomas Kearns, Mrs. E. F. Holmes and the Misses McMillan and Wilson. The rooms were decorated entirely in green, excepting the dining room, which was in pink, the table having a spread of heavy pink satin with insertions of gold lace, and a mound of pink carnations and ferns forming the centerpiece, while crystal chandeliers with rose pink shades were at each end. Punch was served from a table spread with cluny lace, and an orchestra stationed in the hall furnished delightful music.

The Billie club gave an informal dancing party last Tuesday eve at the Ladies' Literary club rooms, which was pronounced by those present to be one of the jolliest affairs the club has yet given. A delightful program of dances was rendered by a selected orchestra, and in the lower hall delicious punch was served throughout the evening. Those who attended were Misses Theresa Burton, Annie Swenson, Alice Farrell, Kitty Johnson, Dorothy Dwyer, Luella Peterson, Margery Mulvey, Sarah Williams, Annie Salmon, Geneva Felt, Edna Ladd, Eliza Birkenshaw, Nana Chapin, Teresa Taylor, Ruth Whitney, Jane Rudy, Ida Cohen, Violet Craig, Miss Alexander, Ada West, Maud Schenel, Eva Ray, Clara Smith, Ethel Felt, Chloé Bitter, Lottie Parker, and Miss Kiesel of Ogden. ## HAMMERED THE AGENT.

Lively Affair and Call for Police but No Arrests Made.

There was a lively mix up at the Singer Sewing Machine company's office on East Temple street about 11:30 o'clock this morning, during which an agent for the company had his complexion considerably damaged by an ardent customer. The police were called in, Sergeant Hempel and Officer Simpson responding, but the names of the principals to the fracas could not be learned and no arrests were made.

According to the story told to the officers, a couple of days ago, the machine agent called at a certain house on River avenue, on the west side, and near Ninth South, and sold a lady a machine. After she had signed the contract, the agent hung around the place and finally went off by insulting the woman. The latter told her husband about it this morning.

At the time above mentioned, a mid appearing man called at the company's office and inquired for the agent. It happened that the man he was looking for was in. The husband politely inquired if he were the gentleman who had sold "Mrs. So and So" the machine. Upon receiving an affirmative answer, the mid appeared man immediately turned into a human cyclone and proceeded to hammer the machine agent. After breaking a tooth or two and blacking the agent's eyes, the husband quietly withdrew. Then the call for police was sent in. When the officers arrived and heard the agent's story, they decided they could not make an arrest unless the injured husband swore out a complaint. The latter insisted that he was not the man who insulted the lady, but declared that he did not want to have the mid appeared man from River avenue arrested.
