Twelve Apostles.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

The news on the Eastern question is ominous. Read one dispatch.

The motto on the new dollar is "In God we Trust." During the general worship of the almighty dollar in America, "this" might be appropriately inserted after the word "In."

The California Assembly has rejected the Retraction bill by a vote of 37 to 29. The Legislature rejoices, and can now go on with its attacks on character, without the danger of being legally compelled to "take it all back."

The Omaha Daily Herald, always enterprising and full of life, comes to us now as a six column paper. It is a wide-awake and generally sound journal, deserves its extensive patronage, and we congratulate its gentlemanly editors on its new appearance, systematic arrangement, general ability, and cheering prospects. Omaha has reason to be proud of its Herald.

Massachusetts is in trouble over the marriage question. A polygamous colony has been established in its very midst, and more than fifty women who call Moses "a Barbary," have petitioned the Legislature to do away with the marriage ceremony. Considering the great preponderance of the female element in that state old State, marriage ought to be encouraged in its widest and fullest extent. Better break down the monogamous barrier than abolish the sacred ceremony.

A new work has just been published by the Putnam of New York entitled "Conquest of New Mexico and California." A part from the general interest of the book it has a special attraction for the people of this Territory, as it contains full particulars of the wonderful march of the Mormon Battalion, a military feat unparalleled in history. It is from the pen of Gen. P. St. Geo. Cooke, who commanded the battalion from the Rio Grande to the Pacific sea. It contains a map of the route and the book is divided into four chapters—New Mexico; The Insurrection; Final Conquest; The Infantry March to the Pacific; California; Final Conquest of California. It is well written, embodies much information as well as episodes of thrilling interest, and is nicely printed and neatly bound in full cloth, gilt lettered. For sale at Dwyers.

The March-April number of the International Review explains several well-written articles by able authors. "Reminiscences of Alexandre H. Stephens" is penned by that gentleman, to correct some erroneous statements made by General Richard Taylor concerning the civil war in the North American Union. "Elements of National Wealth" by David H. Wells contains some valuable financial statistics. "The Mexico of the Mormons" by Prof. Prichard, in a picture of the history of that country from 1867 to 1871. Some notes of Bologna by Madame Villard, contains notes on the lives of learned ladies of Italy. "The Method of Electing the President" discusses dispassionately the various propositions for a change of the present method. "Modern Love," the second paper, is an elaborate review of this subject. "Relation of Morality to Religion" contains some excellent reasoning on the relative influence of each upon the other. "Silver in Art" touches upon the skill in artistic metal work of different nations. "Imperial Federation in Germany," second paper, gives a clear insight into the internal workings of the present German system of government. "New York and its History" is a summary of the first volume of a comprehensive work on the subject. "Contemporary Literature" contains reviews of recent American, English, German and French books. A. S. Barnes & Co., New York, publish every orders received at Dwyers.

House.
Washington, 18.—O'Neill offered a resolution directing the Attorney-General to inform the House whether, in his opinion, the annual appointment of ten commissioners, to the military and naval academy, have been made in pursuance of law or custom, and if by a special privilege, it has been construed as entitling such persons of appointment, adopted.

Hanna introduced a bill for the establishment of a mint at Indianapolis.

On motion of Stephen, certain testimony taken by the committee on naval and marine measures, was ordered printed.

The Speaker, in pursuance of the order made yesterday, called the committee for reports of a private nature.

to it after His resurrection as having been done by him. The apophysis and the general tenor of Scripture is against the assumption. The real meaning of this passage, Mr. Metz claimed, is that Christ preached by the spirit through Noah gave instructions, and that view is in harmony with the immediate context and with all other Scriptures.

strengthening their positions in Egypt, Palestine, and the Phenician, and near California, as it for the purpose of invasion, instead of permanent. He says the conclusion is extending that the war is not over. Russian transports, in great numbers, are now landing Black Sea and taking away the sick and wounded, but no able-bodied soldiers.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Mosina Neither Accepts nor Rejects.

LONDON, 19.—The Post states, in an official form, that Russia has neither accepted nor rejected the proposition for the admission of Greece to the congress. She is disposed to agree to the admission of the Greek delegate, with merely a consultative voice.

Two Representatives Each.

Berlin special says also Powers have agreed that they shall each have two representatives in the congress.

Invasion suppressed.

News from Epirus is meagre, but sufficient to confirm the report of the complete suppression of the invasion in the district of Chlemoutsi. The expeditionary force has been collected and protecting refugees.

The Turkish irregulars continue their rapine, murder and devastation. Sixteen villages have been burned or pillaged, the inhabitants of which fled or perished.

The Turks, authoritatively represented, have agreed to withdraw from the Black Sea and take away the sick and wounded, but no able-bodied soldiers.

The means, manner and methods of collecting news in Washington are vile, vicious and various. The most successful reporter is the most successful spy. The "newspaper man" that can garble in gossip till he gets the grain of truth, and then culture rumor to the wire, is more valuable to his paper than the builder of sentences weighty with thought and resplendent with wit. The average reporter is a young man of vast and varied misinformation, but, "he knows the ropes" and has, the cunning to hold his tongue. This last accomplishment endears him to cabinet officers, senators, and heads of committees, the original sources of intelligence on subjects purely political. An exception sometimes in the Senate is held with closed doors, and here caution is taken to prevent the publicity of its proceedings, but the big argus of the press is there in spirit, if not in corpore. Not one grave Senator is noting the words, actions, or movements of his peers, in order to profit by them.

Count Bismarck has called the just for journalistic sensation. It is the same way with the closed doors of congressional committees, and cabinet councils. Be they ever so hermetically sealed, their detailed proceedings will be known and discussed by the farmer, the mechanic, the woman, the child, the wife, in the four corners of the Union, on the following morning.

The ubiquitous reporter has shalved the mysteries and mystifications of diplomacy among curious but not venerable historical relics, belonging to an era of government for the good of the governors, and not for the governed. The press is not now without censorship, but it is as broad as its circulating area, while the mass meeting and the polls have lifted diplomacy above the intrigues of a few privileged or accredited individuals, and fused it into politics.

There is somewhat trite reflection by the press on the secret society of a reporter, who is accused of such practices as crawling under a bed (this was before he had grown so fat), to overhear the secrets of statesmen—walk arms in arms the length of Pennsylvania Avenue with the most popular person in the land, and to be the personal confidant of the president of the late Czar.

True the press is not now without censorship, but it is as broad as its circulating area, while the mass meeting and the polls have lifted diplomacy above the intrigues of a few privileged or accredited individuals, and fused it into politics.

The reporter is a phenomenon worthy of study; he calls himself, and is pleased when he is so called, John Doe. But what he writes is not John Doe. The man who attempts to get beyond a recitation of narrative and vulgar facts, he founders in vice and rapid expressions of a human want of understanding. What he writes will not live, at least not in the form he leaves it. Today it appears in the columns, to-morrow it is waste paper, but, meanwhile, it has passed through the refinery of the editorial room and become a part of the chronicle and philosophy of the time.

C. A. S.

It is through the perversions of these blind guides that the ranks of infidelity are filling up continually with new recruits. They make the word of God of none effect through the preaching of the gospel when the acceptable year of the Lord arrived, living according to God in the spirit, is a plain proof that the popular doctrine as declared by Mr. Metz, that imprisoned spirits cannot repent, is incorrect and contrary to the Scriptures on which alone he has to depend. And his statement that "the ability to repent will be taken away from the wicked, so that they cannot become good if they would," is alike unscriptural, absurd and defamatory of the character of God of infinite justice and everlasting mercy.

Our correspondent at St. Petersburg does not give a more cheerful report. It is there said by persons of considerable influence, that while it will be no easy task to get the congress to assemble, it is likely to be successful if it does. England and Austria are accused of being animated not by a mere desire to protect their legitimate and material interests, but by jealousy of the military and diplomatic success of Russia. It is the desire of diminishing as far as possible the consequences of the war that Russia, it is stated, will declare, though she is willing to have such questions as that of the Straits discussed, the conditions she has already signed are a minimum of what she will fight and determine to demand. The discussion of the results of the war being thus impossible, England will seek to increase them by demanding the extension of Greece; but the effect of this will be to break the alliance of the English alliance with Turkey and Poland, and then recognize Russia as his ally. That these wild notions should be seriously entertained by persons of authority in the Russian capital indicates a condition of mind by no means favorable to a satisfactory conclusion of the present negotiations. The terms of peace must be an armistice, or a truce, but Russia is not assisting Europe to place a favorable construction upon them.

The Russians near Boulair have been reinforced.

England Resolved on Immediate Action.

The Times' correspondent is informed that if the Russian assurance as to the character of the treaty and basis of discussion before the Congress are not made satisfactory he will return home. Gallipoli will be necessary to the success of this statement, is the fact that the Royal Engineers have received orders to hold themselves ready for immediate service. Other species of operations are being made which tend to prove that England is resolved on immediate action in case certain contingencies arise, and whose occurrence is regarded as probable. Among these contingencies would be an attempt by Russia to carry out any action towards closing the Dardanelles or taking position at the mouth of the Bosphorus. It is urged by conservative authority that Europe has as much to fear as hope in the meeting of the congress, if it does not meet, each European power will stand prepared to prevent the infection by force of the disease.

The Light of latter-day revelation dispenses the fog which these unauthorized exponents have conjured up to obscure the word of God, and by his aid the humble soul may discern the purpose of Jehovah for the discipline and redemption of His children upon this planet; and, beholdings the insensibility, perfusion, and glory of His great salvation is led to worship, venerate, love and obey the Eternal Father who prepared the plan of human redemption, and to follow the Son who was lifted up that He might "draw all men" unto Him at the last day.
