An Epic Poem .- Since the announcement of a new poem from the pen of Sister Hannah T. King, her many friends have been eagerly awaiting its issuance from the press, and will be pleased to learn that it has a length made its appearance. It is a book of 62 pages, w 11 printed and neatly bound in cloth or paper. The poem is mostly in English couplets, a kind of metre well suited to epic subjects, though there are variations from it in different places, according to the mood of the writer or the nature of the matter in hand. The subject is a synopsis of Church history, from the birth of Joseph the Prophet to the advent of the Pioneers into Salt Lake Valley. We have not perused it through, but can readily see that it will be studied with interest by the many to whom is bound to find its way. We wish Sister King every success in its circulation, which we are satisfied will result in good. Tomore mood and drow

They did not pursue the investigation further, the old lady being a sort of a hermit and having retired for the night, and they had learned nothing further about it up to the time Mr. Poulton informed our reporter. The news came too late for us to get anything more for this evening's issue. It is thought, however, that while foul play was no doubt designed and attempted by the villain who decamped so hastily, he did not succeed in his vile purpose beyond what is above related.

Wards were represented, and all Moral-when your require the services would have been, no doubt, but for the circumstance unavoidable on account of the pressing nature of the business in hand. A letter from Surveyor Jesse W. Fox to President John Taylor set forth that the most strenuous efforts were being made by the City and County authorities to prevent the threatened overflow, but the work was one of such magnitude and the waters of the river were coming up so rapidly, that unless immediate help was given from other sources, the floods would conquer and great destruction of property be the result.

This letter, with one by President Taylor to the Presiding Bishopric, was read to the meeting. President Taylor urgently requested the raising of the number of men required (twenty from each ward) to assist in the important work. The Bishops were asked to express their views and say what they could and would do in the matter, and each responded accordingly, promising to do all that was possible in the laudable and patriotic undertaking.
