BREVITIES.

The Prince Salm Salm has a piece of Maximilian's heart in a bottle.

Laurel ruffles on the shirt front are a Paris fashion for male full dress.

Is there any propriety in calling deaths vital statistics?

The Maryland oyster trade employs 850 vessels and 3000 canoes.

Paris has a newspaper entitled "Heaven's Journal."

A Georgia politician says of an opponent that he would be "an average hog in any drove."

"I wish," said a son of Erin, "I could find the place where men don't die, that I might go and end my days there."

A young Russian Prince, Scherbatoff, has married a lady of seventy years. He took her for money, and she took him to get the title of Princess.

A gentleman lecturing for the Blind Asylum, began by gravely remarking: "If all the world were blind, what a melancholy sight it would be!"

The mind and qualities of a person are judged by the world in general through the medium of the clothes on his back, or the gold in his pocket.

The locusts in Tennessee have the letters "N" and "W" clearly designated on their wings, which the natives ominously believe signifies "Nothor war."

We copied a day or two since a story that the Empress Eugenie was going to Ireland. It is a mistake of Mr. Reuter, the proprietor of news in England. She thinks of going to Ireland.

Father Ryan, at a dinner party in Chattanooga, was asked for an epitaph on Governor Brownlow, taking for granted he had departed this peaceful life. Father Ryan gave the following:

Pause, gentle reader, lightly tread!
For God's sake let him lie.
We live in peace, since he is dead
But hell is in a fry!

A Scotch barber who was much given to dram-drinking, was one day shaving a customer, who finding the fumes of the whisky too much for him, in the middle of the job lost his patience, and exclaimed: "That horrid drink!" The barber replied, emphatically: "Ay, ay, sir, it does mak' the face awfu' tender."

When the Duke de Choiseul, who was a remarkably lean man, came to London to negotiate a peace, Charles Townsend, being asked whether the French Government had sent the preliminaries of a treaty, answered he did not know, but they had sent "the outline of an ambassador."

An eminent divine boasted to Henry Ward Beecher, that he had accumulated ten thousand sermons. Quoth the Brooklyn preacher: "Tell me where they are stored. If there should be a deluge I would seek that spot at once as the drest of all places."

Some employments may be better than others; but there is no employment so bad as having none at all. The mind will contract a rust and unfitness for everything, and a man must either fill up his time with good, or at least innocent business, or it will run to the worst sort of waste—to sin and vice.

An electric organ is being built for her Majesty's Opera, Drury Lane. The organ is to be erected at a distance behind the scenery, as usual, but the organist will, for the first time, take his place near the conductor, and in the orchestra. An electric cable of insulated wires will pass beneath the stage, connecting with the keys of the instrument.

A double white camellia, with 1,500 expanded flowers, and as many buds still to open, was exhibited at a floral show in Ghent. There were also as many flowers and as many buds on a chandler's, and also about the same number on a camellia imbricata. These plants were in cones about fifteen feet through at the base, and were small ones in pots ten years ago.

A mean man having a large family found it rather hard to keep up the table, and has adopted the following ingenious plan:

"Who'll take a cent and do without his supper?"

"I'll!" exclaimed the children, all eager to get the prize.

The old man pulls out a pocket-book full of red cents, which he keeps for the occasion, and after giving them one apiece sends them off to bed.

Next morning they all looked like starved Arabs.

The old man calls them all around him and with an air of gravity asks, "Who'll give a cent to have a nice warm biscuit for breakfast?"

It is needless to say the cents are forthcoming.

The chief cause of most of the diseases to which the human body is subject, is a superabundant acid in the stomach; and that superabundant acid is occasioned by overloading the stomach with food or drink. For the stomach can only digest a certain portion of food in a given time, namely, that which is in contact with its side—all the rest must wait its turn; consequently, if the stomach be overloaded, the superabundant food will ferment and generate an acid, and the portion of food thus fermented and converted into acid when it comes, in its turn, to be spread over the stomach to be converted into chyle, frets and irritates the stomach by its acid and corrosive qualities, and very often produces inflammation more or less violent, which is indicated either by heart-burn, eructation, stomach-ache, or other distressing sensations. Nor is this the whole of the injury. If the effects of this acid be not arrested, all the organs which sympathize with the stomach partake of the distress, in proportion to their previous constitutional strength or debility.
