Imposing and beautiful as are the scenic attractions in approaching the valley of the Great Salt Lake, as well as in and around that wonderful basin, as in and around that wonderful basin, I have not feit called upon to refer to them in detail, much less to attempt a description of their many and varied charms. This for at least two good reasons. In the first place, they are patent to every traveler passing over the line of the road. Secondly, the task has been undertaken by so many writers that by this time nearly every stay-at-home reader must be somewhat familiar with the most prominent and striking features of the landscape. I might add a third, and still better rea-son, viz., that I should signally fail to do anything like justice to the subject

In these respects I rank it before the far-famed Weber Cafion and the Devil's Gate, through which the track roof the U. P. road passes. gees whirling and thundering through the narrow pass. Taking a strong buggy at the village of Ogden, you have an easy if not very interesting ride over a tolerably level plain for about three miles before the gsteway to the pass through the moun-tain is reached. Arriving here, and having made an abrupt turn in the roadway, a scene of awe-inspiring grandeur bursts upon the sight. Orden grandeur bursts upon the sight. Ogden river, swollen by heavy spring rains and fast-melting shows, comes roaring two vertical walls of solid rock hun-dreds of feet high, with just enough of a shelf along its spray-dashed bants to allow a single vehicle to go safely through. A little farther along, an ap-parently frail but really substantial bridge spans the hurrying flood. After this is passed and another short turn made in the road, a second view, still grander, wilder, and more impressive, mee's the eys. It is as if a huge moun-tau of everiasting granite were cloven in twain by the hand of Omnipotence, and parted just enough to let the pent up torrent mas through. On either stile stand towering and almost perpen-dicular masses of brown and weather-st sized rock. NEPHI CITY, Uiab, 16th July, 1872. Editor Deseret News:

Just before leaving Mount Pleasant, to-day, the Indian Agent, Dr. Dodge, Col. Nugent, of Camp Douglas, Major Little-field, of the White Pine River Agency, and Mr. Geo. Bean, Indian Interpreter, arrived to have a talk with the Indians in reference to have a talk with the Indians in reference to their going to the reservation. It appeared, from what passed, that the whole proceedings were a failure, the In-dians were determined not to go. Mr. Dodge reasoned with them, told them what proparations he had made for their return, the amount of beel, flour, &c., at the differ-ent points awaiting them, and promised them his future assistance. All this did not induce them to comply. After a great deal had been said at Fountain Green, yes-terday, and Mount Pleasant to-day, without any apparent hope, the above gentlemen left Mt. A. M. Musser and others to return to the reservation, they came to the conclusion to return immediately. Dr. Dodge, after receiving this news, purchased a number of beeves and a large amount of flour to supply their wants until they reached Strawberry Valley, where fresh supplies awaited them. A doctor will arrive here this evening by the coach to go to the va-rious camps to administer to their alck. I was toid by citizens of Fountain Green that these gentlemen manifested a great
