PRESIDENT JOS. F. SMITH TALKS TO YOUNG PEOPLE

Tells His Auditors in the Thirty-First Ward Last Night "You Can Do Anything You Want, Republican, Democrat or Anything Else-I Never Tried to Turn Anyone."

The Thirty-first ward meetinghouse was filled to overflowing last night on the occasion of the conjoint session of the Mutual Improvement associa-tions. President Joseph F. Smith and President Anthon H. Lund were the speakers and were listened to with rapt attention for 30 minutes after the usual time for closing.

Both speakers alladed to existing conditions, President Lund counseling his hearers to be united in all things and to stand together as one against those who sought to overthrow the Church. President Smith devoted his concluding remarks to politics. He de-tined the meaning of the word, affirmed that he had never sought to in-firmed that he had never sought to in-fluence any max in his political ideas and deplored the fact that some men seemed to have politics on the rain. They were to be pitied.

PRESIDENT SMITH'S ADDRESS. President Joseph F. Smith in the reface to his address endorsed the remarks of President Anthon H. Lund and exhorted the young people present to profit by the example of anclent his-tory and the legends of mythology, because he affirmed history often re-peated itself.

because he adhrmed history often re-peated liself. Continuing he said that there was nothing in the world so great, grand, good and necessary as the gospel of Jesus Christ. "There is no bigger thing on earth." declared President Smith with striking emphasis, "than that which is called 'Mormonism." This speaker said that men might lie, blacken the characters of the follow-ers of the gospel and speak all man-ner of evil against the truth, but the truth, "declared the speaker. "It is his husiness to fight the truth and he fights it all the time." Continuing, the speaker assorted that if the wicked, the corrupt, the vile and the unhoir creatures of the saints to think that they were in danger and have fear for the outcome, but inst so hours as all order for the saints to think that they were in danger and have fear for the outcome, but just so long as all manner of evil was spoken against them so long could the saints rest as-sured that they were being persecutes for righteousness sake. The wicked, stated the speaker, hate the righteous. That they were deadly opposed to righteousness, he declared, was because their own corrupt lives were in dange righteousness, he declared, was because their own corrupt lives were in dang-er of being laid bare and exposed in all their hideousness through coming into contact with good men and pure women. Comparisons were odlous and an unclean individual in the company of an upright man or woman suffered in comparison. President Smith then paid his respects to scoffers and those who resorted to ridicule and said that scoffing and ridicule never had nor never would make the truth null and yold, for this was impossible. BEARS HIS TESTIMONY

BEARS HIS TESTIMONY.

President Smith then bore his testi-mony regarding the Prophet Joseph whom he knew when a child. The Prophet he characterized as a pure, honest, Godfearing man who would never wittingly give pain to any man, one who would not have done anything against anyone except in sold deforme one who would not have done anything against anyone except in self defense and as a last resource. The Prophet Joseph's view of things was to let every man believe as he pleases un-molested, provided he did not interfere with the rights and peace of his neigh-bor.

bor. From speaking of the attributes of Joseph Smith the speaker proceeded to address his hearers on fillan duty and referred touchingly to his own moth-er and the trials and tribulations which followed her for years through-out the time following the date of her joining the Church in Canada. The oft-told story of the events at Kirt-iand and the subsequent expulsions from Missouri and Ilinois were dwelt upon in detail, and through them the upon in detail, and through them the speaker said his mother never once

SLANDERERS ADMONISHED.

SLANDERERS ADMONISHED. President Smith then decried the spir't of falsifying, backbiting and bearing false witness. He declared that if there were such in the midst of the saints that it was not mete for others to follow the example and strike back in the same manner. Their ex-ample should not be followed he as-sorted, rather should such be reproved. He then went on to instance men in the Church with whom he was ac-quainted who were the soul of honor, men who would not dream of attempt-ing to take advantage of their fellows in business or do anyone an injury. They had never hurt anyone yet they were held up to calumy and ridicule, WARNING TO BOYS.

WARNING TO BOYS.

Specifically addressing the boys and young men present he warned them against saloons and the contracting the against saloons and the contracting the habit of drinking. Those who persist-ed in the habit, he declared would eventually become estranged from those who sought to love them, from their parents and own kin to eventually become the associates of drunkards, gamblers and adulterers by their own choice. choice

The tobacco habit also was decried and every bad habit formed had to be overcome. Idiots and imbedles were the heritage of those who persisted in bad habits and violated the laws of life said President Smith who thanked God that he had a large family every one born sound in limb and form. He desired to impress on the audience that this he said in no boasting spirit but simply that he had tried to live ac-cording to right and truth. The speaker declared that God had blessed him and his family and not a single member had ever lacked shelter, food and shoes to their feet, "I have never robbed a man of a single penny," he declared, "and God has blessed us." WHAT IS POLITICS? The tobacco habit also was decried

WHAT IS POLITICS?

WHAT IS POLITICS? "And now I want to say just a few words in regard to politics," said President Smith in conclusion. "You need not be afraid, whether you are a Republican, Democrat or anything else, for I will not say anything that will trouble you. "True politics is only another name for the wisest policies of government, whether municipal, county, state or na-tional. If you can find the policy that will preserve your rights, liberties, and your home from being caten up by tax-ation and suandered, that policy is the best all the time. "But it is deplorable to see any man get politics above their religion, and they would sooner be eternally lost and see their church destroyed before they would modify their politics. They often are talking of something they know mothing about, and they spread dis-sension and trouble. sension and trouble.

NEVER TRIED TO TURN ANYONE. "I do not propose to let politics strike in on me. It is a good thing to keep politics on the surface so you can de-cide what is best to do, and to do what is visit is right. "You can do anything you want, Re-publican, Democract or anything else. I never tried to turn anyone.

Thever theo to turn anyone. "Never lose your head; keep your mind clear, "Let us seek God's kingdom and God's righteousness first and last, for it is the greatest thing in all the world."

TEMPERANCE THEME OF YOUNG PEOPLE

Well Attended Meeting Held Yesterday at First Congregational Church.

FARMING LOCAL OPTION BILL

Measure Will be Presented to the Coming Session of the Legislature.

The Young Peoples' societies of the Salt Lake Evangelical churches held a well attended temperance meeting yesterday afternoon, in the First Congregational church, Secy. Mumford of the Salt Lake Christian union told how 400 members of the young people's societies were backing up the move-ment to abolish the soloon, and said a local option bill would be presented to the next legislature. Rev. L. S. Bower-man of the Immanuel Baptist church said: "The question of the anti-saloor said: "The question of the anti-saloon movement is a vast one. All kinds of experiments have been tried in past years to cope with the evil. No license, high license, the dispensary and state prohibition have all been tried, but note, of those methods accomplished all that was desired. The local option-movement is one of larger scope and has been found to be more successful. Fifteen hundred saloons have been wiped out in Illinois alone in the past few months by local option. The best way of attending temperance is by a great system of educating the people up to its benefits and advantages. "Unless the moral sentiment of a community is back of local option, such bgsislation would not have the desired effect and would be practically nil. Big cities such as Chicago, New York or Boston are not ripe for temperance, but Sit Lake is. "De temperance,

Big cities such as Chicago, New York or Boston are not ripe for temperance, but Salt Lake is. The temperance movement here, if properly conducted and vigorously pushed, will be crowned with success. I hope to see the day when there will be national prohibition in the United States. I hope to see the time when that curse of humanity, the salean is wined off the face of this the time when that curse of humanity, the saloon, is wiped off the face of this great country. We stand committed to no party or no candidate in this temperance movement in Salt Lake, but we will commit ourselves to the man who has the moral backbone to fight the saloon and fight it to the end." Rev. P. A. Simpkin of the Phillips church said:

Rev. P. A. Simpkin of the Phillips church said: "This temperance has neither politi-cal nor religious significance. It is a movement for the whole people, for their betterment and their uplift, and is and ought to be above partisan poli-tics. It is the attempt to solve the great moral question which énters into our public life. There is no use of en-acting legislation behind which there is no sentiment. Morals can be regulat-ed by laws, but they cannot be legis-lated into the people. The sentiment of every right-living and good-thinking man ought to be behind the temperance movement, and they ought to inforse the values gained by advanced temper-ance legislation. The big brewers of the country have given their assent to the saloon business had fallen into the hands of unscrupulous men, men with-out morals. They have expressed their desire to weed those men out of the business, We think the best way is to abolish the saloon evil entirely. "We helive that we can achieve leg-

We believe that we can achieve leg-islation that will solve the saloon evil here. We think that dens and dives here. We think that dens and dives and low saloons—and there is no ques-tion but that they exist—can be erad-feated. The temperance movement here, if successful, will be the salvage of many lives which are annually wast-ed because of the poisonous stuff which unscruppious saloon proprietors sell. Local option will not only mean a sal-vage of lives, but a salvage of character and finances. We ought to realize that nothing affects the economic life more than the saloon. "They were thankful that they had their lives and the gospel." he said, "They did all this because they had received from the Lord a knowledge of the truth." Con-tinuing, he said that his mother was a woman of faith, one who believed in prayer and that he had time and time again seen her prayers answered. Continuing he related the incidents leading up to his first mission and the testimonies he received and how, day by day, he learned to know of a surety that the Gospel is true. "There is no streater thing in life than the plan of that the Gospel is true. "There is no scenario the second second second second second life for the living and salvation for the dead," he said prior to exhorting the young people present to learn the truth. "You can draw your own conclu-sions from this incident," added the speaker after a pause. President Lund then cited other instances taken from history and the scriptures where men had been tempted to go astray, and declared that history was being repeated in this day. He urged the saints to maintain a united front in the de-fense of sacred places and concluded his remarks with the prayer that the saints stand as one against those who sought the overthrow of the Church.
