

PRISON BREAK NIPPED IN BUD

Desperate Fight of Two Guards
With Richard Deming
Who Had Knife.

DURING SUNDAY SERVICES

Exciting Scene at State Prison Yesterday Morning—Warden Orders
Ure to Shoot Convict.

The watchfulness of Warden Pratt and Deputy Warden Ure of the state prison nipped in the bud, yesterday, carefully laid plans of three desperate convicts to kill one or more guards and effect their escape while en route to the county house on the 22nd of this month. That is the date on which Richard Deming is to be tried for destruction of public property and attempting to escape from the county jail; and Joe Sullivan and Abe Majors, witnesses for the defense, were to be with him.

Warden Pratt was given a tip last Tuesday that Deming had a knife, and later he learned that the three desperadoes had put up the scheme to kill their guard and escape when being taken to court. Deming, as the accused has the right to summon witnesses, and he had a letter, Deming to the warden, to his attorney, notifying him to call Sullivan and Majors, friendly convicts, as witnesses for the defense. The men were to provide themselves with knives, and at a favorable moment, while on the road, were to suddenly spring on the guards, kill them and get away. Deming had boasted he would never come back alive, after once leaving the prison for the courthouse. Had the men kept his mouth shut, and kept his counsel, the plan might have succeeded. But the warden, who is usually as usual among evil doers, the tendency to boast of what they propose doing and their vanity in fancied self security, defeated his intentions; so the warden soon found out what was in prospect.

SCENE AT SERVICE.

At 10:15 a. m., yesterday, the warden was quietly informed that Deming had a knife on him, and the official decided it was high time to act. Deming was out in the corridors of the cell house mingling with other prisoners, and Guards Cleveland and Taggart were directed to take their knives and go in there, as though they had no particular errand, and seize Deming as he came along the side of him. This they did, marching the desperado toward his cell to search him. At that moment, Deming reached inside his shirt for the knife which he pulled out, but in the scuffle it dropped to the floor, where Cleveland quickly picked it up. Deming broke away, and before the two guards could get hold of him again, a cordon of convicts had surrounded the desperado to shield him from the officers. Help was summoned by phone from the office, by a trusty on call from the guards, and immediately three bells were rung on the yard gong. The entire prison obeyed the order promptly, except Deming. The State Prison Society of Christian Endeavor was holding its regular Sunday morning meeting at the time. In the prison chapel, with five Endeavorers from town and some 75 prisoners; and Miss Fanny Thome of the Third Presbyterian church, and a high school teacher, was in the midst of an address, when the yard bell clanged out its warning. Instantly Guard Dyer, who was in charge in the chapel, rang three bells for the chapel gong, and the entire audience of convicts left in a body for their respective cell houses. There was nothing left for the visitors but to withdraw, which they did, and the regular services for the entire day were declared off.

ALARM SOUNDED.

Warden Pratt sent all the available guards immediately inside armory, and rang the alarm call in the neighboring cottages where the guards live. This brought out the entire force, men who were on duty at the time. In the Millard court was present, he having brought up a prisoner, and was anxious to take a hand in the game, but this service was not needed. Warden Pratt hurried in with the guards, with Deputy Warden Ure, who came off the wall, to find Deming had taken refuge at the head of a corridor stairs. The two guards had fought their way to that location from Deming's cell, where Deming dropped over the railing as he escaped, and gave him a terrible blow on the head from his black-jack. The man came tumbling down the stairs all in a heap, so the deputy did not fire. However, had the guard delayed his action a few seconds longer, Deming would have been shot dead, and was in for further fighting.

But the officials took him severely in hand and beat him up so that he was quickly used up, and could offer no further resistance. The man was then led out, "pacified," and escorted to "the Tombs," where he was left revolving many things in his mind.

DEMING'S PRESENT ADDRESS.

"The Tombs" is a large concrete cell at the rear of the prison which the warden has built for the entertainment of men like Deming. The furnishings are most severe, simple in their nature, there is plenty of light and air, and the occupant has unlimited time to think. A man could work out an entire new mental and intellectual philosophy while shut up in "The Tombs." The Christian Endeavorers in the double gateway at the entrance, departing as Deming was brought out of the cell house covered with blood. The ladies were visibly affected.

Deming told the warden that he had another knife hid up in his cell, and the guards were unable to find any trace of it. The knife that was taken from Deming was a piece of thin steel five inches long and nearly two inches wide, tapered off at the handle to a needle point. For a half, strips of bed ticking had been utilized. It was an ugly looking weapon, and could easily be thrust into a man's heart through any thickness of clothing. Deming continued game, remarking to the guards, "Well, I can't see how I can win this game, and naturally didn't want to stay here any longer. I had to go." Deputy Warden Ure asked him, "You have been out several times before, why didn't you do it then?" "Well, I'm still here, and I guess that's pretty good evidence I didn't get the chance I was looking for."

WAS GIVEN A CHANCE.

It is only a comparatively short time, the first of the month, that Warden Pratt released Deming from the third or lowest grade of prisoners, and turned him out on parole, remarking that he intended to treat the convict like a man, and give him a chance to show if there was anything of the man left in him. At the time, he declared he fully intended to see and behave himself like a model prisoner, and was so emphatic in his declaration, that the warden trusted him. Deming lost his false upper teeth in his escape from the hospital while confined there, and recently while Gov. Cutler was in the state prison with the board of pardons. Deming's request to see the executive was granted. The governor told Deming if he would behave himself in the future, he would be given a new set of teeth, and let the money with the warden, as his feelings were touched by the man's tale of distress. Deming, however, to the lack of chewing gum. This is the way Deming kept his promise. A paper was also found on him, in the shape of a note to the warden, stating about what he intended to do, and soliciting his assistance; but the note was never delivered.

DEMING'S RECORD.

Deming is serving 10 years for grand larceny. He feigned sickness so successfully while in the county jail that he was sent to the Hot Cross hospital, whence he escaped by jumping from a window in his night shirt, not to be captured until he was in Oregon. He and Sullivan, who is serving life for the murder of Patrolman Ford, were pals in the county jail and were continually plotting to escape. One attempt was frustrated by a fellow prisoner named Prussing, informing the sheriff, and for this the two men vowed vengeance on the German. This they attempted to carry out later in the state prison, and came very near it, before guards rescued Prussing, and the two desperadoes were put in the cell only the first of the month since they were released from confinement and put to work again with the other prisoners. For a time Deming put on his best airs, but it was only a look for opportunities for further deviltry. Warden Pratt is making further examination of the prisoners to ascertain if there is any further movement to make trouble. As soon as the new cell house is completed, the desperate convicts will be turned into the new building, and the warden will then no more trouble to apprehend. There are now 272 prisoners with only 238 cells, so constant watchfulness is necessary to prevent hatching up of plots.

DID MARTIN APOLOGIZE?

Noted Councilman Apparently Did Not
As Case Against Him Is Set For Hearing.

Has City Councilman L. D. Martin made an apology to Charles Crane for using profane, abusive and threatening language toward Mr. Crane on the evening of the day the bond issue was decided by election?

The question was frequently asked in Judge Diehl's court this morning. The statement had been given that Joe Lippman had acted as peace maker and that Martin, the well known "American" statesman, had written a letter of apology to Mr. Crane.

It was and is alleged that Martin met Crane on Main street and because the latter had opposed the bond issue, proceeded to profanely abuse Crane and threaten to "knock the latter's block off." According to the allegation, the language used by Martin was really terrific.

Martin was arrested, and Atty. Lippman appeared to defend him.

The case was continued from time to time, and then word was given out that Martin had, or was about to, apologize to Mr. Crane, and the case dismissed. Martin was at police headquarters this morning and had a talk with Assistant City Atty. Rogers. Apparently he has not apologized, for he asked that the case be set for trial on Wednesday the 16th.

SEEK COURT'S AID TO OBTAIN LAND

Government Starts First Step in Enlarging Federal Building
In This City.

DESIRED TRACT CONDEMNED.

Action Filed and Jury to Ascertain
Its Value Asked—Unexplainable
Mistake at Start.

When the government built the Federal building in this city it showed unexplainable forgetfulness in not getting sufficient land for an adequate site; now suits and condemnation proceedings are necessary and the first step has been taken. Condemnation proceedings have been instituted in the federal courts here by Dist. Atty. H. E. Booth on behalf of the United States government. The government is seeking to condemn ground west of the federal building. The desired strip is 40 feet wide—the frontage on Postoffice Place or old Market street and 180 feet deep. A jury to ascertain the value of the ground is asked, and the assessment brought to the court.

DEFENDANTS, MANY.

The defendants in the proceedings are: The Minor building company, William Butcherworth and Burton P. Peck, executors of the will of Charles H. Deane; William P. Kise, administrator of the estate of Charles H. Deane; Matthew H. Walker, Annie Swenson, Julia A. Swenson, Maggie Swenson, Cecelia A. Swenson, Joseph E. Swenson, Frank H. Swenson, Emma E. Swenson Grimsdell, J. E. Sullivan, doing business as the Sullivan "Clear" company; Joseph Leontand, J. Hanson and Frank A. Van Huyn.

THOUSANDS READY.

An appropriation of $175,000 was put aside for the enlargement of the Salt Lake federal building by the legislature. As it was found the present quarters can not accommodate the offices crowded into them, let alone a number of department offices, the city. So the addition of the couple of stories at least was found imperative, and as it is against the policy of the government to build on a tall building, an extension of two or three stories was most likely to be built.

STRANGE INDIFFERENCE.

The ground covered by the present building cost the government the sum of $1 (one dollar) and the whole block could have been obtained for as little as $100. The government is so ridiculously a low sum property holders in the neighborhood of Third South and Main were anxious to have the government building located there to enhance the value of their property. But the government took just what it needed for the building, alone, leaving no space for so much as a flower bed, when it was to be a quarter of block with which to erect the handsomest buildings and surroundings in the west. A large appropriation was made to build the building, the generosity of the Walkers had made an expenditure for ground unnecessary. The pleadings of the government were so simple, the example the Walkers, reached deaf ears. The building was erected on a site measured to the inch and now a long, tedious process of litigation by courts, must be carried out.

HOW CITY IS MALIGNED

Gov. Cutler Tells Readers of "Newspaperdom" Something About Real Conditions in Utah.

In a recent issue of Newspaperdom appears a short article from Gov. John C. Cutler, written by request of the periodical mentioned. In it the persons who make a business of defaming this state and its inhabitants are excoriated by the executive, and it is shown that the certain of such a report day by day becoming more and more futile. Following is what Gov. Cutler has to say:

"It was for a long time the general custom for our four newspapers to visit Salt Lake City for a day and visit points of interest in a carriage, getting a vast amount of misinformation from guides who vied with each other in telling the most extravagant stories about the Mormons. Then these 'traveled' tourists would write back to their home papers, depicting horrible stories they had heard of, and these stories were accepted as gospel truth. There may be some of that kind of thing going on now. But when people really seek information, willing to spend time in investigating—visit Utah and see our great temples, churches, universities, lodge and association buildings, public schools and comfortable and refined homes, they at once conclude that the adverse reports spread concerning Utah people cannot be true.

"Utah today is like a vast garden. In all parts of the state, on irrigated and dry land, the crops are good and give promise of a splendid harvest. The farmers are prosperous and the land is the kind of prosperity that's contagious. It spreads to all classes. Our mines of gold, silver, lead, copper, etc., are producing more than ever. The panic, almost as many men as before the panic commenced, and many new mines are being opened. Our coal mines are working on a larger scale than for some time past. With the operation of mills, smelters, sugar factories and other enterprises, an excellent market is made for labor and for the farmers' products.

"We invite good people to come and make their homes with us. No matter how good they will find their neighbors here as good as themselves. They may justly be warned against listening too much to a few disgruntled people who have nothing but evil to say of a portion of the community. It is a disease with them, and in the near future it may be quarantined for the protection of the community. It is likely otherwise to be inoculated with the same germ of slander and bigotry. But from the loyal, truthful, honest people of the state, and the recent influx of newcomers, need fear nothing. They will receive courteous treatment, heartfelt help, and full and correct information from these."

INSANE MAN ARRESTED.

Crazy Foreigner Taken Into Custody
And Landed in Padded Cell.

Yesterday afternoon word was received at police headquarters to the effect that an insane and violent foreigner was creating terror among a gang of working men in the O. & N. tracks near the Warm Springs, and that the man had terrorized the entire neighborhood. Children ran screaming to their frightened mothers, and brave fathers fed a few slugs to the shot guns.

Just what the man was doing or had done was not imparted to the police, but "Uncle Billy" Hilton and Patrolman Moore, boarded the patrol wagon and made the long run in record time. They found it impossible to drive the wagon so Hilton and Curran walked to the scene. In a box car, surrounded by a gang of workers, they found a man strapped down with numerous coils of rope and baling wire. The police could learn nothing about the man suddenly "gone daffy" and manifested dangerous symptoms. The police took charge of him, but the fellow was not so easily tamed. He was taken to the county jail and given a quiet place—the padded cell. His real name of Theodore Panopoulos, or words to that effect, he could not speak English and therefore no one could understand what he said beyond speaking his own language. He was a drunken man trying to pronounce "proutitranstibstantiatonist" with a mouthful of hot potatoes.

The man's condition was about the same today, and tomorrow he will be given a hearing before a lunacy commission and probably be sent to the state mental hospital.

MISSIONARIES IN JAPAN

Former Minister from Kingdom of Mikado Says Younger Generation
Is Investigating Creeds.

K. Hara, former Japanese minister for the interior and ex-council for that nation at Paris, and now a member of the Japanese parliament, is visiting Salt Lake in company with Kametaro Iyima, of the Furukawa Mining company of Tokyo, and S. Yoshimura, of Tokyo. The gentlemen are making a tour of the United States and are interested in Salt Lake is given over to a study of American smelting methods. They will visit the Bingham smelters this afternoon and this evening take train for Anaconda.

In appearance Mr. Hara would not be recognized as belonging to the same race as those Japanese seen heretofore. He is tall and has a distinguished carriage. His hair is snow white and the features of his face would in no way disclose his nationality. Mr. Hara does not speak English. Mr. Iyima, who has been in this country before, is the spokesman for the party.

In the course of an interview at his apartment in the Knafvood this morning Mr. Iyima said that he understood from the reports in Japan that the missionaries of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Japan were being well received by the younger generation. He says that owing to the absolute religious freedom in Japan all Christian creeds are looked upon as being the same creed and only those who made a special study of the matter become acquainted with the nature of the various Christian creeds. The other general opinion he, do not make up a large portion of the Christian converts. It is with the young men that the new faith spreads. Mr. Iyima, acting as interpreter, Mr. Hara said that conditions in Japan were never better, and that although the war had left them with a heavy debt the commercial activity of the nation was on the increase and was lightening the burden. Concerning the late rumor of war he said: "The recent rumors of war with the United States I believe to be absolutely baseless. As for myself I have the most friendly feeling toward your country. I think that it should be the endeavor of both nations to foster the brotherly feeling and enlarge the trade each with the other."

"The gentlemen say that Salt Lake is the most beautiful city in the United States. They attended the organ recital this morning at the tabernacle and expressed themselves as being delighted with the colossal organ."

AFTER THE RESTAURANTS

Chief of Police Seeks to Get Ordinance
Abolishing Private Boxes
In Cafes.

That a movement will soon be started by the police authorities to abolish boxes in restaurants, or at least have a provision made in the city ordinances forcing proprietors to keep the boxes open, is quite a new thing. A great deal of complaint has been made about closed boxes in restaurants, not all of them, of course, where young girls are lured by men, filled with liquor, and then started on the downward path.

About four weeks ago Chief of Police Pitt sent a communication to the city council with reference to the boxes in saloons. He gave orders to saloon keepers to keep their booths open so that officers could see who were inside. He also sent a communication to the council asking that an ordinance be passed either abolishing the boxes or providing that the doors be removed from the same. No action has been taken in this matter by the council, but Chief Pitt hopes to have the ordinance drafted and passed.

Pitt said this morning:

"We are not having any particular trouble with the saloons as in most every place where there are wine rooms, so-called, the doors have been removed. In the wine rooms where they are permitted in them during hours prohibited by law, we can draw them out, but in saloons, where they are different for the reason that there is no ordinance covering them, they may be kept closed. However, I have asked the council to pass an ordinance regulating this matter in the district where the saloon will be in a better position to handle this feature, but as it is we can do but little."

DENVER SINGERS COMING.

Manager J. H. K. Martin Here Arranging for Hotel Quarters.

Manager J. H. K. Martin of the Denver competition chorus has been in this city arranging for quarters for his singers. The chorus, which is composed of 500 people in Salt Lake during the contest. A telegram from the Denver chorus, dated Sept. 10, states that two singing organizations may be expected from that city. Among the singers of international fame, who will be David Evans, the noted carling, whose success in the contest already been noted by the Deseret News, and a band concert in which the visiting band organizations will take part. The number of entries exceed anticipations.

FUNERAL OF MRS. EDMONDS.

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Pamela A. Hardy Edmonds were held Saturday at the Third ward meetinghouse, commencing at 2 o'clock. There were a large attendance of relatives and friends, and the burial offerings were many and beautiful. The speakers of the occasion were: Rev. H. H. Haddock, D. D., Collett and Col. M. M. Kaighn. John V. Smith and Elder Gardiner offered the opening and closing prayers. Music was furnished by the ward choir, and by Mrs. Pearl Smith, Miss Rasband and Mrs. H. H. Haddock. The hymns were "The Beautiful City," "O My Father," and "Face to Face," respectively. Interment was in city cemetery.

DRY SUNDAY BUT THERE WERE LEAKS

Saloons Generally Obeyed the Law and No Arrests
Made.

SEVEN SABBATH DRUNKS.

Liquor Sold by Violators of Ordinance
From Roominghouses and Possibly from Restaurants.

In spite of the fact that "dry Sunday" is the rule which Tom D. Pitt, chief of police, is trying to enforce; despite the fact that the saloons generally have obeyed the order issued several weeks ago, and in defiance of the city ordinance regulating the liquor traffic on the Sabbath, there have been "leaks." There were probably more "leaks" yesterday than on any Sunday since the order was issued, and detectives are now trying to find where they came from. All day yesterday and up to the midnight hour, plain clothes men were watching the saloons, but none were detected in selling liquor. Patrolmen were kept busy last evening, however, rounding up drunks, and seven were thrown into the drunkhouse and fined $5 each this afternoon by Judge C. B. Diehl. There were undoubtedly many Sunday drunks who were not arrested, but there was no mistake as to those who were brought in.

It is known that some of the restaurants have been in the habit of selling liquor on Sundays, but the police have been unable to detect them. Then, too, liquor is sold just outside of the city limits and the purchasers bring the stuff here and drink it.

But the main trouble is undoubtedly caused by keepers of cheap roominghouses, and especially those located above saloons, where intoxicants can be furnished to temporary roomers, roomers for an hour or two, with but little fear of being caught.

HAS GOT THEM SPOTTED.

"I am satisfied that the saloons and also the restaurants generally obeyed the law yesterday," said Chief Pitt this morning. "There were more Sunday drunks yesterday than there have been for several weeks. There were leaks through, and they were being well received by the younger generation. We've got some of 'em spotted though, and will land them all right."

Not only the saloons, but the restaurants were watched yesterday and there was no complaint from them. A place in the county known as Hill's Farm, where David Logan, the colored man who shot and killed Dick Hawkins on Commercial street Thursday morning, went immediately after the shooting, was complained of. A plain clothes man did not give him name, complained to Chief Pitt that her husband was in the habit of going to this place, getting drunk and then returning home in a bad humor, causing the children to be disturbed and terrorizing the family.

She said her husband was at the place yesterday and returned home the usual way, but in the afternoon, soaking himself with the murder-breeding booze. Chief Pitt referred the woman to the county authorities.
