LITTLE FOLKS VS. THE BIG FOLKS.

Dr. Vincent Tells Parents and Teachers Something About Both.

HIS LECTURE A STRONG ONE.

How the Bad and the Goody-Goody Children Will Get Together, and The Lesson It Teaches.

One of the most interesting and practical lectures recently given in this city, was that delivered last night, in Barratt hall, by Dr. George E. Vincent on "Children vs. Growns." The speaker was happy in his illustrations and comparisons, and the facts he wished to impress upon his audience were made without hesitancy. His idea was to show the mistake made by grown up people in attempting to inject upon the child mind, ideas that properly belong to maturity, and before the youthful comprehension is sufficiently developed to grasp them. Dr. Vincent's idea was that the plans of childhood should be sympathized with by parents and older people and their ideas entered into with sympathetic appreciation and cooperation in development. This will gradually build up and mature the child mind in a healthy growth, and avoid those interference with the natural progress of youthful evolution that are so often hurtful, if not positively injurious. Dr. Vincent explained that "goody-goody" is a word that is used by the older people to describe the child who is too good, too obedient, too obedient to the rules of the older people, and who is too good to be true. He said that the child who is too good to be true is a child who is too good to be true, and who is too good to be true. He said that the child who is too good to be true is a child who is too good to be true, and who is too good to be true.

The speaker called attention to the fact that some children are considered totally depraved, a view that is held by the older people, and who are too good to be true. He said that the child who is too good to be true is a child who is too good to be true, and who is too good to be true. He said that the child who is too good to be true is a child who is too good to be true, and who is too good to be true.

Dr. Vincent related an instance of the "goody-goody" child, who was a boy who lived in the same block that he did, kept his boy shut up in a large back yard around which was a strong wire fence, and who was too good to be true. He said that the child who is too good to be true is a child who is too good to be true, and who is too good to be true. He said that the child who is too good to be true is a child who is too good to be true, and who is too good to be true.

Dr. Vincent believed in letting youthful spirits vent themselves and that older people ought to be charitable and bear with infantile explosions. He said that the child who is too good to be true is a child who is too good to be true, and who is too good to be true. He said that the child who is too good to be true is a child who is too good to be true, and who is too good to be true.

Children are conscious of being children, and they feel it an imposition. It is the mother's sympathy that enables her to bring up her children and her close relation with them bring them to her for comfort and consolation. She sees the dangers in their young lives and draws them to her by cords of love, and entering into their childish experiences as she does, how quickly and firmly she holds their lasting confidence.

and by a judicious system of coaching and inspiration to effort, the childish comprehension may be made to entertain thoughts and aspirations that develop the finer qualities of womanhood and manhood as they grow up, and which in the end may result in the highest and the noblest fruition.

Dr. Vincent urged upon his listeners the fact that "we must face the child life and its facts. The attitude of the teacher towards the child determines the attitude of children to children. Teachers should enter into the various interests of their pupils and thoroughly understand their thoughts and motives."
