BIG BONDHOLDERS LOOK OVER LINES

Gould Projects and Pressing Necessities Being Brought To Their Attention.

MERGER VIEWED AS PROBABLE

Rio Grande Systems, While Operated By One Set of Officials, Await Formal Consolidation.

W. S. Martin, assistant general manager of the Denver & Rio Grande, is today showing Edgar L. Marston of Blair & Co. of New York, Alfred Blinzig, a banker of Berlin, and Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Dunleavy, over the Western Pacific. These visitors are heavy holders of Gould bonds and, as was explained yesterday, are being shown the Gould systems. What changes are needed will be explained and with conditions understood by the leading investors, the placing of bonds will be an easy matter. Blair & Co., underwrote the $50,000,000 bond issue of the Woster Pagific and this concern is Western Pacific and this concern is requesting its members to agree to an extension of the underwriting syndi-

Big things are shaping up in the Gould system of railroads. It is believed that with the Western Pacific completed, the Denver & Rio Grande and Rio Grande Western will be merged into one line with one title. Gould owns both D. & R. G. and K. G. W. now, and one set of managers conducts the affairs of both, but the two lines have never been formally conducts the arrairs of both, but the two lines have never been formally merged. It is understood this action is to be taken soon. The Rio Grands Western, with its rich coal land holdings and other valuable possessions was a big dividend payer from the start, and it is really the Rio Grands Western which made the Western Paging a possibility and which is now Western which made the Western Fa-cific a possibility and which is nov-making the Salt Lake-Oakland pro-ject a reality. With the new line built, the Rio Grande Western will be ready to lose its identity under the title of Denver & Rio Grande. Gould's plan is to have a strong trans-continental line with steamship connections, to compete with Harriman interests.

VAST MILEAGE. With the Western Pacific complexed. Gould will have over 17,000 miles of railroad, traversing twenty-three states. As early as 1903, Gould admitted that he hoped some day to effect a huge consolidation of all his lines. The "some day" would be that day which saw all his lines completed. day which saw all his lines completed. The Western Pacific is Gould's biggest and latest venture. This is to be completed in about a year, so the first step Gould will make toward realizing his dream of several years will be the consolidation of the two Rio Grandes. An issue of $150,000,000 worth of bonds will be agreed upon by both companies. Of this sum probably $80,000,000 will be used to wipe away indebtedness of the merging concerns and the remainder will be used for necessary improvements. Blair & Co. necessary improvements. Blair & Co. and the other firms which underwrote the $50,000,000 bond issue of the Western Pacific will advance between $10,out to $12,000,000 to the Rio Grande so it can make good the deficiency in the sum raised for the construction of the Western Pacific and will receive in return more bonds of the merger

With such steps as these coming, it is natural that members of big bank-ing firms should be traveling over the Gould lines. With bonds placed, plenty of money to push all work ahead will have been obtained, and the won-derful transformations worked about Harriman terminals here will be duplicated around the Gould terminal

Detectives Sheets, Janney, Chase and Bart made a raid on a gambling den in cooms one and three in a roominghouse night, and while they found no gamblers there they discovered a crooked gam-oling outh which was confiscated. The officers went to the landlady of the roominghouse and demanded the keys to the rooms. When they attempted to unlock the door they found it was secured with Yale locks and bolts. The windows and keyholes were papered over so it; was impossible to see into the room. The officers tried to pry off the locks but finding it impossible to do so they battered down the door. In the room was a crooked roulette wheel and also a fare layout of the surething variety. The officers also found card markers and peker chins, all of which indicates the kind of a "game" which had been run and what chance a "sucker" with money had to win.
