EVENING NEWS.

Monday, January 10, 1876.

The Town of Glenwood, Iowa.

GLENWOOD, Mills Co., Jan. 1.

The Mormon exodus from Illinois took place about thirty years ago. Their prophet, St. Joe Smith, had just been massacred at Nauvoo by the "GENTILES," who bore them as little good will as the Egyptians, 3,450 years ago, did the Israelites. When the Mormons gave up their homes in Illinois, they turned their faces to the west, and started with their families, goods and chattels, in search of the unknown "Land of Promise." They went in small colonies under their own leaders, halted here and there to raise fresh supplies of grain, etc. Many of those Mormons were amongst the earliest settlers of western Iowa and eastern Nebraska. Some of the colonists thought they had found the promised land, and remained permanently where they had settled; others only long enough to raise a crop, and moved further west.

The earliest settlement by white people in Mills county was thus effected in the year 1846, by one of these Mormon colonies, numbering about thirty. The location which they selected was on the Keg creek—the same rivulet that flows through the town of Glenwood—about four miles north of the county line. They built themselves houses, and because those houses were rushed up in the twinkling of an eye, they called their town Rushville.

The town however, disappeared as quickly as it arose, and all that now remains of this, the earliest white settlement in the county are a few bricks that had been used for the chimneys of the houses, and a tombstone, made of a roughly worked limestone, and bearing the following inscription—

J. EASTMAN,
Died April 10th, 1847.
Aged 60.

We are indebted for these interesting facts to Mr. Watkins, of the firm of Walker & Watkins, attorneys at law, at Glenwood. Mr. Watkins, some years ago, passed through the place, and saw the stone. Among the inhabitants of Glenwood, even the oldest, the very name of Rushville has disappeared from memory. Of the earliest settlers in Rushville, we are informed that one Wm. Brittain is still alive and residing in the county, in Oak township. The rest all seem to have left.

The town of Glenwood is beautifully situated in the valley of the Keg Creek, about three miles west from Pacific Junction, and six miles from the River Missouri. It is one of the oldest settlements in the county, and the second house built in the town in 1848 is still standing, a little behind the Betts House. Most of the earliest settlers here also were Mormons, and the first judge elected in the district was a Mormon, who originally hailed from the Isle of Erin.

It is related of his honor, that during his first session a modest member of the bar politely attempted to enlighten the Court upon some point of law by opening the code and commencing to read therefrom, but he met with a stern rebuke from the bench: "Sit down, sir! down to h—l with your cud, the Coort has the law in his head. I won't listen to ye at all, at all."

The Gentiles, having in the meantime grown more numerous, informed his honor at the next session of the court, that he had better "git up and get." It is probable there was more of the fortiter in re in the argument, than of the suaviter in modo, for his honor instantly acceded to the request. —"Lohar" in Omaha Bee.

Marriage and Prostitution.

Again another opportunity for investigation presents itself in order to find out the least sexual evil. Hardly one, from every five men are married or will ever marry.

This is a sad but real fact. Nature fully affords a woman for every man as if in compliance with the common law of universal duality, but scarcely one from every five human beings are legally married.

At least eighty from every one hundred men or women have not entered the matrimonial sphere. What will then become of the "eighty-percentage" of these abandoned daughters of Eve? shall they silently and inevitably fall the involuntary victims of social injustice?

Shall they die out and murder themselves by inches through the dumb despair of sexual starvation.

Or, shall they (to obey God's first command of "Grow and multiply," which they are unable to legally accomplish) put an everlasting stigma of infamy on themselves and family?

How can they possibly wear Maternity's Bright Diadem, to them by God given, when there is no help-mate to crown them with?

And this is but the natural and inevitable result of the present abnormal social condition even in the so-called Christian and civilized nations of the world.

Now the question is again which of the two is the less evil, forced celibacy with the untold secret horrors and syphilitic puses which contaminate innocent generations, and fill the world with spurious bastards, or polygamy without venereal disorders and without illegitimate offspring? Society owes justice to all, chiefly to women and children; and to avoid the cause of degradation, decay, short life or premature death to them (and to all) is the chief point on which the laws ought to gravitate.

Legislators from both civilized and enlightened Europe and America affirm that to prevent the causes which produce harlots is an impossibility before annihilating the causes which produce the exorbitant ratio of bachelors.

Hence the origin of legally licensed brothels among the so-called Christian people in both hemispheres.

Compare for a moment, if you please, illegal and persecuted (strange to witness under our flag) Mormonism, and legally licensed brothelism.

The productiveness, health and usefulness of women in the first, and the sterility, sickness and short life in the last condition. Nature denies children to harlots. The Savior of Christianity was the offspring of a long line of polygamists.—Las Vegas (N. M.) Advertiser.
