

A Russian Winter Picture.

The streets of the town are wonderfully gay and picturesque. Sledges with the famous Russian trotters move gaily about over the clean white snow, the swift horses jingling their merry bells and tossing their handsome heads in their gay silver harness. Fair-fur-clad ladies talking pleasantly, and making quite a holiday time of it, going about in delightful big spirits. The awful winter is to them a mere change of pleasure; they take their brisk recreation of sledding by day, and muster at brilliant balls and assemblies at night. Nothing can quench their thirst for excitement and society; but the theatres are closed by police, lest the coachman waiting for the play-goers should be frozen on his box. The tariff ceases for public carriages, and the droschky drivers hardy enough to brave the weather may charge their own fares. Gentlemen walk about with pelisses of the black fox, costing as much as £800 apiece, because this fur is the warmest and lightest—for even fashion has reason in its caprices. Persons less wealthy, or less luxurious, wrap themselves in the skins of the racoon or the skunk, the bear or the beaver. Ladies go clothed in sables, the finest of which should be dark hair tinged with gray. The yellow fox gives a good light warm fur, but it is discredited on account of its cheapness. Our houses are, in the south, not so well built for this weather as those in St. Petersburg and the north. Not only do our windows freeze, but the frost and snow force their way inside the rooms, and lie inches deep of a morning under the balcony doors and between the double windows. But by means of ovens between the walls, which we call stoves, we can contrive to keep our rooms facing the south at 14 degrees of heat Reaumur. An iron stove, when it burns well, which is not often, will bring even a northerly room up to 18 degrees; but this is too warm. It requires some management to get a comfortable temperature which is about 15 deg. Reaumur. An English fireplace, however large and well-fed, will by no means head against the difficulty.

Manufactories, etc., in New Brunswick.

According to the census of 1861, there are in the Province of New Brunswick, British North America, 80 steam saw mills, 609 water saw mill; 6 steam grist mills, and 273 water grist mills; 71 water oat mills; 22 steam tanneries, 10 water and 94 manual do.; 21 steam foundries; 79 weaving and carding water mills; 5,134 hand looms; 9 breweries that produce 329,040 gallons; 1 distillery producing 3,000 gallons; 31 "other" steam factories, and 36 water without any given designation. The value of leather produced for the year was $290,548; of saddlery, $77,750; of boots and shoes, $331,717; of hats, $50,500; of candles, $68,300; of soap, $74,000; of chairs and cabinet work, 117,593; of woodenware, not cabinet work, 124,158; of iron castings, $202,500; of machinery, 193,111; of oil: manufactures, $762,078; 129,594 gallons of crude and 70,000 gallons refined oil were produced valued at $72,219. In the coal production there has been a remarkable increase. In 1851, 242 tons were raised; last year the number of tons was 18,244. In 1861, 42,96 cask of lime were taken out; 42,476 grind stones; 14,080 tons of building stones; 10,050 tons of lump gypsum, 2,000 of ground do., 1,000 barrels of the same, 10,000 barrels of calcined gypsum, and 480 tons of other minerals.

The Late Prince Albert.

In the domestic circle he was the most impartial of fathers. Finding the Prince of Wales at fault once among a party of lads with whom he had been at play, he took him among them and made him apologize for his rudeness, notwithstanding they were only the sons of sturdy yeomen. He delighted to assist the poor, and would design buildings for them upon the most economical plan, and lend his aid in their construction. In his household he invariably threw off all official dignity. A disturbance at one time arose between himself and the Queen, at the end of which the Prince retired to his room. Victor, a believing herself to be at fault, came to his door at an hour afterward and knocked. "Who is there," said the Prince. "It is the Queen," was the reply. "I cannot open my door for the Queen," he answered. Victoria immediately said in a subdued tone, "It is your wife," and the door was opened at once.

WHERE HAS URSENBACH GONE?

HE has removed from the stand where his name grew renowned, and his friends in despair are all crying; But slyly he laughs, for a better is found, Where his Clocks and his Watches are lying, He sings the old songs of Tell once again, A sure sign that his business is thriving; Ah! truly the notes of the minstrel explain, What a deuce of a trade he is driving. Oh! he's fixed him a Shop next to Godbe's & Co., Just above—blaze in drugs, goods and glory; Together they'll make quite as pretty a show, As any recorded in story.
O. URSENBACH,
Watchmaker.
