

people's minds, as the first and peculiar "Joe, The Man of the Hour." The rest is a delight which he utters when at last he has his hated rival Barrigan under his heel, by the victorious echo of some Messian battle cry of old.

The Orpheum bill next week runs its present open to comedy jugglers. On the last season's attraction, "The American Forte," in "An Old Colony," followed and was soon suffering from a previous juggler's jinx which will keep him off the stage for a short time.

Viola Allen has been invited to play the leading role in the London premier of Henry Bernstein's play, "Le Bernard" ("The Wolf"), with a Miss Allen will produce in this country late next month. The London production will take place on Dec. 2.

A show well known and popular actress, Mrs. St. Rose Rattie (Kitty Blanchie), has fallen upon evil days.
Broken in health and unable to act, she can no longer contribute to her own support. Her other professionals, however, are organizing a number beneficial performances in her behalf. Among those who have consented to the show are M. and Mme. Stanhope, Ethel Barrymore, Virginia Elmore, Florence Roberts, John Marquess, Blanche Butler, Annie French and others.

Margaret Anglin's popularity, when she goes to Australia in the spring, will surely whatever. This year at the theater, both audience and press have given her dancing of Harry Wynona is said to be one of the hits of the season.

Direct from the Paris Jinglebomme comes the Four Dancers, who give an original and new dancing spectacle which has won approval all through the season.

Dixon & Anger company, who appear in a screening farce entitled
"Our West," promises something laughable.

Miss Allen, known as "The Female Miss Albin, is probably, when she goes to Australia in the spring, will

on the Louisiana last Friday. She brings a new French play which she expects to produce before the end of the season. Her tour by repertoire will be given next month.

Anna Held talent in her dressing room at the Christian Street theater, Philadelphia, last Thursday night. Physician and actress suffering from a previous headache which will keep her off the stage for a short time.

Viola Allen has been invited to play
the leading role in the London premier
of Henry Bernstein's play, "Le Ber-
nard" ("The Wolf"), with a Miss Allen
will produce in this country late next
month. The London production will take place on Dec. 2.

A show well known and popular actress, Mrs. St. Rose Rattie (Kitty Blan-
chie), has fallen upon evil days.
Broken in health and unable to act, she
can no longer contribute to her own
support. Her other professionals,
however, are organizing a number beneficial performances in her behalf. Among
those who have consented to the
show are M. and Mme. Stanhope, Ethel
Barrymore, Virginia Elmore, Florence
Roberts, John Marquess, Blanche Butler, An-
nie French and others.

Margaret Anglin's popularity, when
she goes to Australia in the spring, will
surely whatever. This year at the
theater, both audience and press
have given her dancing of Harry
Wynona is said to be one of the hits
of the season.

Direct from the Paris Jinglebomme
comes the Four Dancers, who
give an original and new dancing
spectacle which has won approval
all through the season.

Dixon & Anger company, who ap-
pear in a screening farce entitled
"Our West," promises something laugh-
able.

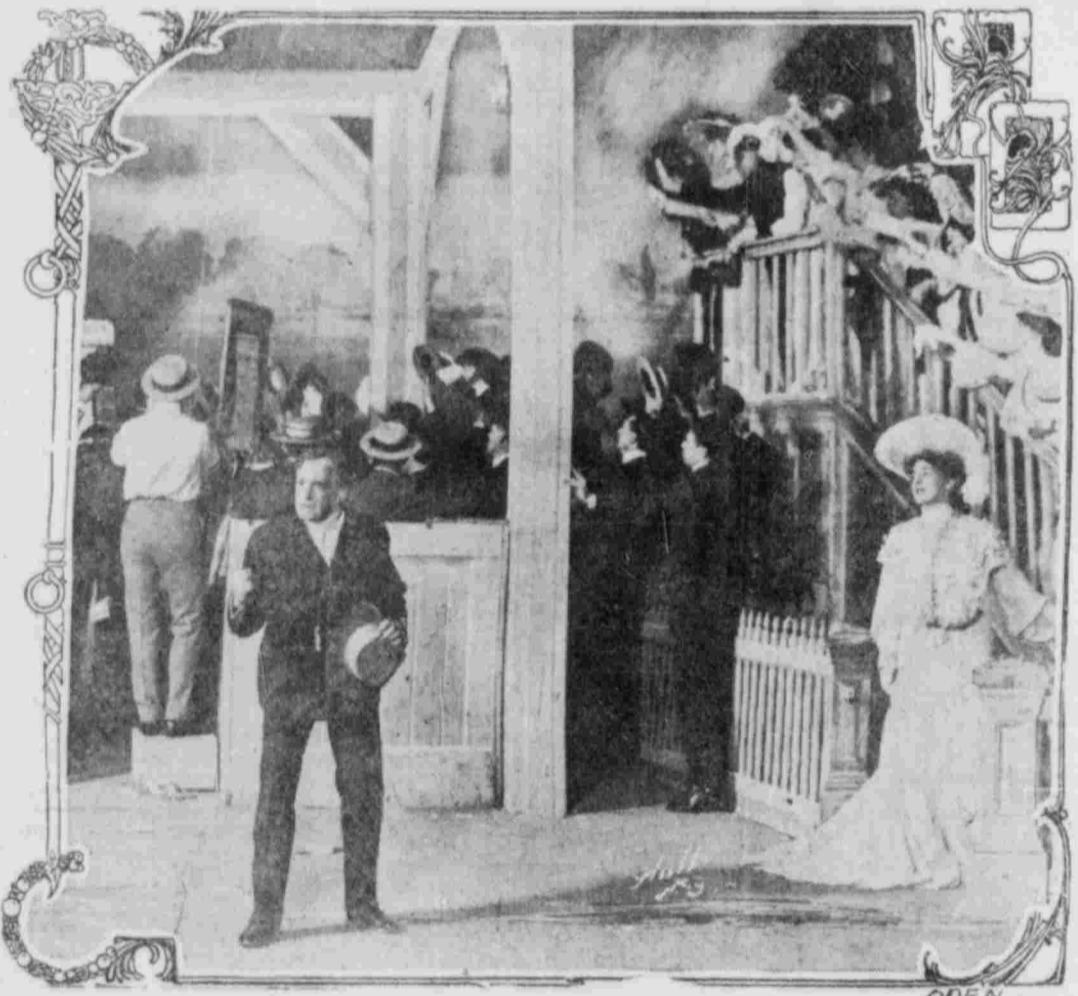

Miss Allen, known as "The Female
Miss Albin, is probably, when
she goes to Australia in the spring, will

THANKSGIVING week is always a big one at the theaters, and the attraction leading that day is surely whatever. This year at the
theater, both audience and press
have given her dancing of Harry
Wynona is said to be one of the hits
of the season.

Direct from the Paris Jinglebomme
comes the Four Dancers, who
give an original and new dancing
spectacle which has won approval
all through the season.

Dixon & Anger company, who ap-
pear in a screening farce entitled
"Our West," promises something laugh-
able.

Margaret Anglin's popularity, when
she goes to Australia in the spring, will

"COME ON. REMORSE!"

Finish of the Great Race scene in "Checkers" at the Salt Lake Theater Nov. 25, 26, 27 and 28.

rely on there ought to be no question as to the business it will do. The auditoriums are of a strong first night Sunday evening.

That popular play, "The Heir to the Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes on a return Saturday and Sunday next with a Saturday matinee. The company is headed by Frank Monroe, Helen Lockhart, a charming actress and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell is the name of the game which a man which a male infant has inherited and the story of the way the father and mother are separated and brought together forms one of the most amusing and interesting episodes on stage which has witnessed. The scene of the christening especially is one that will be long remembered, and this set alone would make the play a success.

Arriving Thanksgiving afternoon,
Mr. Lorch will arrive for the remainder of the week with his favorite delineation,
"The Heir to the Heir." The Sign of the Four." Of course this play needs no introduction, and in it Mr. Lorch is especially remarkable.

Hercules" gives an entertaining act, consisting of heavy juggling and will handle a cannon, large iron balls and a heavy man.

She is followed by Edward Lavine, called the very best of comedy jugglers.
The ever popular Orpheum orchestra and kinodrome animation pictures complete the bill.

Theodore Lorch, who seems to be Belton & Co.'s trump card, is making again this time to present a less sensational society drama entitled "The Unwritten Law." Of course, it is a problem play, which means that it will be criticized variously on all hands.
The leading part, that of Paul Featherstone, an artist, will be in the hands of Mr. Lorch with the woman's role will be assumed by Miss Marion Martin.
This lady is a newcomer to Salt Lake, having but recently joined the Lorch company, but she is said to be an actress of rare strength and legitimate methods.
This play will run four nights and a Wednesday matinee.

Arriving Thanksgiving afternoon,
Mr. Lorch will arrive for the remainder of the week with his favorite delineation,
"The Heir to the Heir." The Sign of
the Four." Of course this play needs no
introduction, and in it Mr. Lorch is
especially remarkable.

Harold Russell, who since he left the cast of "The Squawman," has been filling one of the leading parts in "The Man of the Hour," has been receiving some excellent notices in the eastern papers. The company is headed by Mrs.
John L. Sullivan. Russell has been especially remarkable.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

Harold Russell, who since he left the
cast of "The Squawman," has been fill-
ing one of the leading parts in "The Man of the Hour," has been receiving
some excellent notices in the eastern
papers. The company is headed by Mrs.
John L. Sullivan. Russell has been
especially remarkable.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and
brought together forms one of the
most amusing and interesting episodes
on stage which has witnessed. The scene
of the christening especially is one
that will be long remembered, and this
set alone would make the play a
success.

That popular play, "The Heir to the
Heir," by Paul Armstrong, comes
on a return Saturday and Sunday
next with a Saturday matinee. The
company is headed by Frank Monroe,
Helen Lockhart, a charming actress
and a strong cast of other
stars.

As every one remembers, the Burrell
is the name of the game which a
man which a male infant has inher-
ited and the story of the way the father
and mother are separated and brought