A short list of social events makes up the record for the week, the few private events in the way of card-parties, Kensingtons, etc., being overshadowed by the Sprague-Walker nuptials on Wednesday, which occupied chief place in the social interest of the week. Mrs Tarbet's reception came next, the affair being one of the most elaborate and preitly arranged of the season.

Surrounded by the fair insignlas of spring, bright May blossoms interwoven with delicate greenery in a profusion that made a bower of the house in which it occurred, the wedding of Miss Winnifred Sprague, daughter of Mrs. S. L. Sprague, and Mr. Albert E. Walker, son of the late J. R. Walker, took place on Wednesday morning, the ceremony being performed at the bride's ome on State street at 10 o'clock. library in which the event took place was decked in roses, carnations, bach-clor buttons, ferns and paims. A canopy of white roses and ferns with a background of smilax and carnations formed an alcove in which the bridal party were stationed, and around the room were a profusion of paims and flowers, the lace curtains having sprays of ferns, and the archway between the library and music room being literally partitioned with an embankment of flowering plants and a drapery of sprays of carnations drooping from above. Behind this floral portiere the orchestra was stationed, consisting of Miss Lamson, pianist, and Misses Sibyl Anderson, Allen and Lamson, violinists. In the parlor carnations, smilax and marguerites were used in profusion and the hall was smothered in liface. In the center of the room draperies of white and green illustion twined with while and green illustion twined with roses and ferns were suspended from the ceiling and caught on the corners of the table. As the brid-al party entered the room the orchestra played the Lohengrin march, which was followed by Schubert's screnade and the Mendels-sohn wedding march. Rev. W. M. Paden officiated. Miss Emima Lunt was bridesmaid and Mr. Raymond Walker acted as best man. The bride Walker acted as best man. The bride wore a beautiful traveling costume of and gold lace, with trimmings of white and gold lace, with hat to match, and carried bride roses. Miss Lunt was gowned in white liberty silk with Duchess lace trimmings and a pink such that the second a pink rose-trimmed hat. A boquet of pink roses completed the costume. Only the families and intimate friends of the bride and groom were present. After the ceremony refreshments were served and at 12:30 the bride and groom left for an eastern trip to include New York, the Pan-American Exposition and Canada, * * * * On Wednesday evening Mrs. John W. ### PARLOR IN RESIDENCE OF W. B. DOUGALL.

One of the prettlest cottages in the city is that of W. B. Dougall on West Temple street. The outside architecture makes it extremely picturesque and the interior is a model of convenience and cosiness. The rooms are all on the ground floor, the parlor and sitting room being on the front, the dining room on the north and the sleeping rooms on the west and south. The cut shows the parlor, a pretty apartment on the northeast, one of whose attractive features is the artistically designed window on the front with its preity draperies. The dining room leads from this room, and the sitting room lis opposite. The wood work in the parlor is of birdseye maple and in the dining room, sitting room and hall of oak.
