

DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Friday, April 7, 1893.

FREE!

Beautiful
Pictures
of

TEMPLE,

Temple
Block and Church Leaders
Given Away
Free with Every
$5.00
Cash Purchase.

SPENCER &amp; LYNCH CO.,

124 Main.
Exclusive Dealers
in

FOOTWEAR

FRAGMENTS.

This has been a more than usually dry day in most cities.

The City Council will hold an adjourned session tonight.

The April term of the Third District court will begin on Monday next.

Notices was given to the proprietors this morning beyond the making of one or two changes.

The newly-organized Irish-American society held its regular meeting in the Wardsell building last night. An interesting program was presented.

John C. Clark has granted a marriage license to John J. Ferguson and Martha Livingston, both of Salt Lake.

Malcolm, Haynes' staff, at depature to San Francisco with wife just now, Criminal business is very quiet with him.

CARL MICHIGAN is up to his neck in work, getting ready for the return of his family, which is to be his departure, Mr. Lincoln.

The Canadian society held a meeting in the old Federal court house last night, which was largely attended by the members of the society. The meeting will meet again tonight at the same place.

HENRY TAYLER, the well known speaker, was told yesterday by his physician that he must remain in his home, the office of the City Hardware Company. It was done at the instance of the Luckenheimer Company at Cincinnati.

NOTICE.

To Stake Superintendents of Sunday Schools.

The lectures of Dr. Karr G. Mason on Sunday schools which have been published in various form are now ready for distribution. If the stake superintendents or some representative from each Stake will call upon Brother Joseph H. Parry, 27 and 29 West South Temple street (opposite the west gate) they will receive an estimate of the number allotted to them. They will in turn immediately deliver them to each school in their respective Stakes, so that no valuable information contained therein will get lost.

General Q. CANNON,
GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT,
JOHN MORAN,
General Superintendent of Sunday Schools.

Special Notice.

The General Annual meeting of the Deseret Sunday School Union will be held in the Tabernacle on Friday, April 7th, 1893, at 3 P.M.

It is desired that a representation from every Stake and ward, and all Sunday school workers, should be present.

GEO. Q. CANNON,
JOHN MORAN,
General Superintendent.

Important to the German Saints.

There will be a meeting at the Social Hall on Friday evening, at 7:30 sharp, for all Latter-day Saints who speak the German language.

All the friends who have been laboring in the cause of Zion are especially invited to attend.

A. H. SCHULTESS,
HENRY HARRIS,
CHRISTY WILLIS.

FREED FURNITURE

AND

CARPET COMPANY

No. 32, 34, 36, 38 E. THIRD SOUTH.

CASH &amp; EASY PAYMENT

Especial Sale of

GUN FOLDING BEDS,

Mantel Beds,

Bedroom Suites,

Carpets,

Parlor Goods,

PORTIERS AND LACE CURTAINS.

BOREAS AT EUREKA.

Treble Work From the Bullion-Deck
Blocks the Railway.

ALL PEACEABLE AT THE CAMP.

The New Mammoth Superintendent—
Chance for Capitalists is an Irreverent Coal Mine.

During the prevalence of a treacherous windstorm at Eureka yesterday no considerable damage was done to property around. A large treble from the Bullion-Deck track, which was blocked thereby for some time, trees were blown down, and several houses were shattered.

Deputy Marshal Horace Cannon returned from Eureka this morning, having gone back to the railroad tracks, where was to go back again, and remain until next Monday. There are at present three other depots on the ground in the neighborhood of the mines, outcome of these will be withdrawn early next week. Mr. Cannon informed a News reporter today that at present everything is peaceful at Eureka, and he does not apprehend any further trouble. Always the only thing now really feasible is to let the railway be kept. The mines began the morning to work two shifts; there are about one hundred miners now employed, and others are coming in an average of four or five per day.

COAL-MINE WORKS DEVELOPING.
John A. Jensen, of Cedar City, is in town and is looking about to get some interest in his new mine. There are two in the Coal Creek canyon, eight miles from Cedar City. George Wood is interested with Mr. Jensen. They have three veins of good coal, six inches, another 5 feet, and a thin vein. They intend to claim it to a first class article.

Mr. Jensen was in to see Secretary Pearson, of the Business Men's association, who gave him a hearing, and is having negotiations with him. Mr. Pearson has already been in communication with the various mines. At present the mine is developing rapidly, and it is expected to reach the line of the proposed road. A railway track can be built to within twenty-five feet of the vein.

NOTES.
Two of the usual claims at Ogallala, Idaho, were sold this week for $2,000 each.

The street fruit vendors are doing a big rail business now-a-days. It will be necessary for the city to expand a good proportion of the business money to be obtained on the refuse left about the streets.

The $50,000 bonds for the upper mine is out all in, and with the greater portion of it, and is to be expected by tomorrow night. Payment is to be made on Monday to the smaller men.

H. R. Hyde's condition is still improving. U. S. also shows uneven compilation, but it will not be a very great while before he is put danger from the ill winds induced by Al. Coffey's at Eureka.

Edgar Cushman, who has been superintendant of the Idaho mine in Calif. since 1893, has resigned. During his superintendance the mine was produced $1,500,000 in gold and $40,000,000 in dividends.

The Mock Groves' Journal, of Miles City, Montana, makes a very gloomy report of the condition of the state. The winter has been severe and in some localities the loss will be heavy, but fortunately this condition only covers a portion of the state.

Mr. Robinson, who recently had charge of the Drama Luminous mine in Montana, oil and gas, in a same location as the Mock groves' mine. There is no superintendent, he is now in the city, and is staying at the Mansion. Mr. Robinson has his family with him, and intends to make Salt Lake his home.

There may not be a diminution in the quantity of tobacco used in this part of the country, but in the matter of cigars there has been a considerable falling off in past year. Sam Levy says he produces a million less during the year, and yet presumably holds his own as to sales for the last few days.

These late men are having matters even棘手 than usual. "What everybody is at conference," said one of them today, "you can't expect much business. The merchants are making it all right, but nothing of that everything in the store is business and will settle as to how it goes."

W. G. Bickley, engineer and teacher of music at Beaver, is one of our young men from that part of Utah. He has suffered no diminution in wealth, however.

Ogallala was again well represented on our stage today. Among the performers were Frank J. Cannon and Mrs. Hitch, who stopped in for a short time to catch their matinee and things here and elsewhere.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

John Rogers, a telegraph office manager of a newspaper, Mountain, who is a time a man of means, has a good income. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a week or two. His paper is taken over entirely by his son, George H. Ashe, Jr., who is managing it.

George H. Ashe, publisher and proprietor of the Richfield Advocate and newspaperman, has a city's visage for a few days, and will stay away for a