A NEW CHESTERFIELD.

According to the code of Councilman Daveier, one of the "privileges of a gentleman" is to call a fellow official "a liar." Another is, when acting as chairman of a committee on rules to regulate proceedings in a legislative body, to favor and support a rule for the sole purpose of "catching suckers." These are entirely new principles in gentlemanly etiquette, and ought to be patented and branded with the Daveier mark for originality. It is department of that kind which elevates the tone of municipal bodies and secures the respect of onlookers. The old Chesterfield precepts will now of course be considered obsolete, and to call a man "a liar" when one disagrees with him, will be counted the sure characteristic of a gentleman. "Catching suckers," too, will be reckoned among the distinguishing talents of hightoned gentility, and deceiving the unsophisticated and imposing upon the public be viewed as shining examples of gentlemanly principles. The wise man of old declared there was "nothing new under the sun." He would have changed his mind—perhaps, if he had lived in the light of the twentieth century, in Salt Lake City and under the glare of the brilliancy of thought and chasteness of speech exhibited by the original member of the City Council from the Fifth municipal ward.

ONLY PITTSBURG SMOKE.

As an illustration of the saying, "Much ado about nothing," commend us to the terrible how-de-do over the alleged invitation to Senator Reed Smoot, to attend and speak at the anniversary of the birth of President Grant. The clergy of the different denominations in that city seem to have worked themselves up into a frenzy over the proposition, and their rabid utterances have been sent over the wires for the delectation of an eager but astounded public. The idea that a Senator hailing from "Mormondom" should be invited to speak on such an occasion, and that prominent members of the club should favor it when mentioned, appears to have shocked their sectarian holiness beyond bounds. Well, they might have saved their bigoted epithets, and spared their narrow protests, for it appears they were altogether gratuitous and unnecessary. Senator Smoot disavows having written any acceptance of the invitation, and as a reason for his silence says he has not received any. The whole story seems to have been what is called in newspaper parlance "a fake," and it was in all probability concocted in newspaper circles.

Our contemporaries can save breath in commenting on the supposed event, and space in repeating the opinions of people on either side, as to the propriety, wisdom, good taste, moral effect and so on, of the gentleman's appearance before the club, for as at present inclined he has no intention of either regaling that assembly with a display of Utah oratory, or offending the fastidious tastes of the cultured clergy of the far-famed smoky city, in the manner so greatly dreaded.

WERE COMPARISONS OBVIOUS?

The Worcester spy of March 27 has a rather spicy editorial on the conduct of a "Josephite" preacher in Cleveland, O. It seems he was very much disgruntled over the presence of Salt Lake Elders in that field, and proceeded to make personal remarks and allusions which exhibited his spleen and did not help his cause. This is a frequent display on the part of "Reorganized" speakers, whose chief theme is usually made up of attacks on the Church, the headquarters of which are in this city. The Cleveland objector declared that the Utah "Mormons" purposely selected the best looking and best educated young men for work in the Cleveland field. Of course that, if true, is a serious offense. But the Worcester spy makes the following caustic comments on the assertion:

"Evidently something had grated terribly on the good elder's feelings. In his excitement he forgot to be polite. He should have confined himself to discussion of differences of doctrine instead of intimating that he was a little bit jealous of the fine personal appearance and excellent address of his rivals."

"The result was that the Utah Elders at the first opportunity modestly asserted that they were not above the average of their brethren in Utah as to physical and mental attainments. They went so far as to say, indeed, that, had an effort really been made to select the best, more handsome and more brilliant men than they would have been sent to preach in Cleveland. It is to be feared that unless the Re-organized Mormons can call together men as comely and as bright as the men from Utah, the chances will be somewhat against them in their missionary work, particularly if they continue to call attention to the enemy's good looks and mental ability."

THE BURDICK INQUEST.

The Burdick inquest has closed with the testimony of a bartender to the effect that Pennell after having had some drinks, had boasted that he could kill somebody, the inference being that Burdick was that "somebody." And that is about all that the long inquest developed as regards the murder mystery of Buffalo. There is really no more light on the case than there was when the inquest commenced, as far as evidence is concerned.

But the inquiry has revealed a state of affairs in some Buffalo social circles, which should furnish a much needed warning to many who have become acquainted with the particulars. It has shown the fearful abyss to which illicit love so often leads its blindfolded victims. Sufficient motive on the part of Pennell was proved, but not a scintilla of evidence could be adduced stamping him as the actual murderer. So that although there are no positive proofs so far, yet suspicion will always hover over his grave. And the amount of misery and unhappiness brought over many families on account of the tragic events, is beyond the descriptive power of words.

The inquest over the death of Pennell is yet to follow, and possibly during the taking of testimony some clue may be found upon which justice may act. The case has attracted the attention of the country. It is one that tells with strong emphasis the old truth, "death" is the wages of sin.

SPRING WAR RUMORS.

Reports of conflicts between Turkish troops and Macedonian rebels continue to come from the disturbed regions of southeastern Europe, but for all that, it is now assumed that the rebellion, at one time scheduled to begin on the 1st of April, has been indefinitely postponed. This is owing to the fact that the Sultan is for once at least making a show of carrying out the reforms demanded. The Macedonians realize that as long as this is the case, Europe will not stir in their behalf, should they commence hostilities.

The friends of Turkey accept the promises of the Sultan in good faith, and are sanguine of the restoration of peace to the troubled province, but reports published in French papers indicate that the outrages are continued, though not so openly and not on as large a scale as formerly. An account in L'Illustration says that ten days before the arrival of the writer in a certain village, four Serbian peasants were decapitated, and the lungs drawn outside of the body, and in the village itself a child of fifteen years had been shot in the shoulder and the chest. During his stay in that place a child was operated upon, whose knee had been cut open by a saber in the hands of an Albanian, for no other cause than the very pleasure of the thing. Observers state positively that they know of 200 assassinations committed in the Ussuk region, and this is believed to be only one-fifth of the entire number. The killings are said to be continued, but in sections, and singly, to cause as little noise as possible. Thus it will take longer time to extricate the protesting element, but the result will be the same. Should this representation of the conditions be correct, the smoldering flames will surely break out, no matter how many blankets Europe is throwing over the inflammable pile.

While peace and quiet are seemingly restored to the Balkan states, inquietude seems to have taken possession of the smaller nations of northern Europe. It is claimed that Holland and Belgium are both in fear of being absorbed, the former by Germany and the latter by France. What these fears are especially founded on is not clear. Germany, of course, would not object to the addition of Holland to the German states. That would give her a fine frontage on the sea and a fine lot of colonies. The Dutch East Indies and the Dutch possessions in the West Indies and on the continent of South America would secure the empire naval bases and coaling stations where they are most needed. The sympathy of Holland for the Boers would perhaps count against the country, as far as English support is concerned, and that may be one reason why Germany is now feared. Should Holland enter the German union, France would naturally reach out for Belgium, to preserve the balance of power.

In the far north there is also a great deal of uneasiness just now. A correspondent of the London Chronicle claims that there is a growing distrust on the Scandinavian peninsula of Russian designs in the north. The Swedish army has been increased, and large sums have been appropriated for the navy and for fortifications. The ammunition reserve has been increased from 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 rounds. Ships that took part in last summer's evolutions have retained all stores on board, and battleships are lying with steam up in the harbor of Karlskrona. Such are the signs that are interpreted to mean that hostilities may possibly at any time break out between Russia and the Scandinavian countries.

Probably these are only rumors. But they remind one that peace is an uncertain quantity in the world. It may be broken almost at any time. It has long been supposed that the day of small states is past. If so, all these countries, and others, are on the program for absorption by their powerful neighbors.

MISSIONS IN CHINA.

Gen. A. R. Chaffee, who has been serving in China and the Philippines, does not see much encouragement in the missionary efforts in the Orient. Speaking specially of China, he says he met a great many prominent Chinamen in Peking, but none of the "better class" evinced any desire to embrace "Christianity." The masses, he said, are against it. At present they are more concerned about expelling foreigners of all professions and freeing themselves from foreign domination than they are about theological questions. And no wonder. One of the most advanced nations has set the example of exclusiveness by closing its gates to Chinamen. Why should not the latter naturally adopt a similar course against foreigners in their country, as far as they are able to carry out that policy? The contact between China and the rest of the world has taught that country to respect the guns and armies of the "Christian" world, rather than its theology. It has found powder more potent than prayers.

The Mississippi is just spreading itself.

It looks as though March were going out half lion and half lamb.

In the case of the automobilist it isn't the pace but the machine that kills.

The Burdick inquest has been reopened and closed again. For repairs?

It would hardly be boasting if Diaz of Mexico were to say: "The State; it is me."

Even "Who's Who in America" does not tell who's chief of police in Salt Lake City.

If tomorrow were the only day when fools have sway how much better the world might be.

The Duke of Manchester's baggage has been attached for debt. This is evidence of his attachment for America.

The cake-walk is becoming less and less fashionable. Why not introduce the cheese-walk? It has strong claims.

When will the allies who have been coercing Venezuela learn that the United States guarantees freedom and not debts?

Jerusalem was badly shaken by earthquake Sunday last. It hasn't had such an experience since the days of Peter the Hermit.

"A young man should make up his mind to fall in love with his work," says Russell Sage. He usually compromises by falling in love with his girl.

The promised Macedonian reforms seem to have slipped a cog and can't be worked. He is a dreamer of dreams who thinks that any reform can come out of Turkey.

Mr. J. P. Morgan, it is said, will build a great museum of art and present it to the American people. Let him do it promptly if he is to do it, for art is long and time is fleeting.

Speaking of the late N. K. Fairbank, Franklin K. Head, well known to old time Utahans, says: "The greatest and noblest citizen Chicago ever had has passed away." That, from that source, is praise indeed.

Tomorrow it will be unlawful for bicyclists to ride on the paved sidewalks within the restricted district. And the ordinance governing this matter should be strictly enforced.

Germany's naval strength is double that of the United States. But it is still true that three armed is he who has his quarrel just. Fortunately for both countries and all concerned Germany and the United States have no quarrel.

Those Kentucky officers who used formaldehyde to disguise desperadoes who had threatened death and destruction to them, probably got a "funch" from the Boomer Schoolmaster who used sulphur on his pupils. He soon smothered them out.

It is an outrage on decency and the people of the city when one member of the City Council gets up and deliberately enlists another a liar. The Council owes it to itself and the citizens to discipline severely such member, if it has the power.

The alarms and exaggerations of Salt Lake papers over the mild cases of smallpox in this city have borne their fruits in other parts of the country. Threats of a quarantine against Utah are made, and people are warned against coming here to conference. What is the use of magnifying an evil, and making the nation believe that this city is either morally or sanitariously vile and corrupt? We assure our friends at a distance that there is no danger in attending the General Conference of the Church. Come and welcome!

There is a strong feeling in the general board of the navy, of which Admiral Dewey is president, that the United States fleet should be built up with the idea of being able to cope with any navy in the world, rather than merely being strengthened to the calibre of the Kaiser's navy," says a Washington dispatch to the New York Herald. It is a very bad feeling, though. How long will it be before this same feeling develops into the feeling that pervades the British navy, that the British navy must be powerful enough to cope with the combined navies of any two powers? The logic of the situation is, if the views of the general board of the navy are to prevail, that this country should have a navy superior to the combined navies of the whole world.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

Young Woman's Journal for April has "A Talk with Apostle Brigham Young" by Ann M. Cannon. This is illustrated by an excellent portrait of the Apostle. There is a poem, "For Easter," by Kate Thomas, and a "Peace Offering," by Julia A. Farnsworth-Lund. "Music and the Masters," is discussed by Edith Ellerbeck. Other notable articles are: "Enter Not into Temptation," Alice K. Smith; "Love that Availa," (continued), Josephine Spencer; "Our Letter from Peru" (illustrated), Elizabeth Claridge McCune; "Accidents and Sudden Illness"—IV Wounds, Leah D. Wilcox; Editorial and Guide department.—Salt Lake City.

The Cosmopolitan for April contains 17 stories and articles and 101 pictures. Chief place is given to an article on "The Americanization of the Canadian Northwest," written by William R. Stewart. A personal sketch of Bjornstjerne Bjornson, is entertainingly written and well illustrated. "To Love or To Be Loved," is a philosophical essay, by Lavinia Hart. Dr. Geo. F. Shears writes on "Medicine," as part of the series, "Making a Choice of a Profession." "Famous Cures and Humbugs of Europe," is by the late Julian Ralph. "Romances of the World's Great Miles" (Calumet and Hecla), by S. E. Moffett. Field Marshall Viscount Wolseley, K. P.; H. G. Wells, Henry Seton Merriman, Sumner MacManis, and several other writers contribute to this number.—Irvington, N. Y.

Conkey's Home Journal for April appears enlarged with eight new pages. It contains five short stories, followed by articles on various topics, such as "How to care for canaries," "How a Woman may become a leader," "Entertaining in a Simple Way," "Original Designs for Waists," "Practical Lessons in Lace and Embroidery-Making," "Lessons in Home Dressmaking," "Dawn of Love Waits," for piano, "Piano Playing," "Vocal Training," etc.—Chicago.

The Easter number of the Woman's Home Companion opens with a charming New England story by Sophie Swett, called "Bayberry Tea." Edith Philpotts' serial, "The Farm of the Dagger," grows in interest. Other fiction is "The Way of a Woman," by Paul Laurence Dunbar, and an Easter story, "Iris Patens," by Frederick M. Smith. The most notable feature shows "How an American Circus Astonished Europe." "A Picturesque Moravian Easter" is a description of a quaint custom at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. There is an Easter song, "Hail to the Risen King." The Nature Study club tells of early spring birds. There are notes for Easter games and Easter parties, and several inviting pages of spring gowns.—The Crowell Publishing Co., Springfield, Ohio.

In the April number of the Arena, Dr. John M. Berden has a god paper on "American Literature and the High Schools." This is followed by a brief "Plea for Simpler Living," from the pen of the Hon. Samuel M. Jones, mayor of Toledo. "Hamlet, Prince of Denmark," is the title of an essay by Dr. Axel Emil Gibson. "Democracy or Autocracy—Which?" is considered by J. W. Bennett, and B. O. Flower presents "The Message of Mazzini," the second paper of a series on the Italian patriot. An interview with J. M. Peabody, A.M., M.D., on "New Zealand—Political, Social and Religious," is quite entertaining, and "The Town That Was Sold," a prophetic satire by P. M. Crosby, Magnusson, A.M., Ph.D., is of timely significance. Editor Flower's department of "Topics of the Times" and "Books of the Day," are interesting.—The Alliance Pub. Co., N. Y.
