By Eastern Mail—The eastern mail arrived yesterday, by which we have New York dates to Oct. 15. The latest dates from Liverpool are to Sept. 28.

The screw steamer Fox, sent by Lady Franklin to the Arctic regions in search of traces of Sir John Franklin's expedition returned to England having been successful.

The postmaster general has received a dispatch from Mr. Hall, Missouri, mail carrier on the Santa Fe route, stating that the mail which left Fort Independence was attacked by Kiowa Indians on the 24th of August, and Conductor Smith and his brother were killed, and William Cole badly wounded. The troops on the Arkansas had gone to Fort Riley, and that the mail cannot run unless troops are stationed at Payson Park, with an escort to Cold Springs.

Lt. General Scott arrived in San Francisco, Oct. 14 on the Golden Age. As the steamer neared the wharf the band played "See the Conquering Hero Comes." So great was the rush of all classes of citizens to see the great soldier before he landed that it became necessary to close the wharf gates. The commander-in-chief was escorted to a barouche, drawn by four milk white horses, and after being driven through the principal streets of the city was taken to the Oriental hotel. He left San Francisco at 5 p. m. Monday, Oct. 17 for Vancouver's island. On his way to the wharf he was followed by those who served under him in the Mexican war, and thousands of others.

Meeting of Hand Cart Company—It will be remembered that on Sunday, the 6th, that a meeting of the Handcart company which traversed the plains under the direction of Captain George Rowley would be held on the 8th inst. (Tuesday) at early candle light, in the Thirtieth ward schoolhouse. Accordingly at the appointed time the meeting convened. The saints occupied about three hours speaking of the journey, and the conduct of Captain Rowley towards them. The unanimous testimony of everyone present was that they were under the best of his duty by Captain Rowley had done his duty by them to the best of his ability. There seemed to be some little dissatisfaction over the supplies of bacon, sugar and tea, but after some explanations from those that had served out the provisions, all seemed satisfied.

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The complimentary dinner given last Sunday night at Delmonico's by the "American Dramatists club," to George Ade, was an elaborate affair, and calculated to impress the guest of honor with his importance in the eyes of the dramatic world, and to show him that his abilities in that direction were closely akin to his work along literary lines, where he has so long been a shining light. It has taken 11 years for Ade to reach this point, and now he may write successful playwright beneath his name whenever he chooses.

Eleven years of struggle for recognition, but Bronson Howard, Clyde Fitch and David Belasco can tell tales of longer years of waiting, the first, 17, the second 12, the third, 14. Now George Ade, may be named with all these and be known to the present and coming generations as having "arrived."

It was an hour of triumph to this patient gladiator to be received at last into the fold, but there he is, snug and tight, and perhaps holding out both hands to some other poor aspirant, who is working with might and main to attain the coveted height.

One subject was particularly dwelt upon by all the speakers, Bronson Howard, Clay Green, George Ade, Col. Henry Savage, Homer Davenport, J. I.

C. Clark and Raymond Hitchcock, and that was the apathy shown by the public towards the poor play maker, while he is using brain and nerve climbing the ladder; he does not lack for patrons after he has successfully produced one play. One witty member suggested that Carnegie might withhold his patronage from one of the many libraries that are dotting the country north, south, east and west, and give the amount to the men and women who are giving the best of their brains to the encouragement of literature, but then Carnegie has never been accused of assisting struggling talent in any direction, so that idea was killed almost before it had drawn a good breath.

Utah was well represented at this grand function by E. Milton Royle and Orestes Bean, both members of the American Dramatist club. Let us hope that our two home authors may yet all the chair us guests of honor, at some similar entertainment, after Broadway has set its seal of approval on their work.

At Mme. Sembrich's song recital last Friday afternoon in Carnegie hall, many Salt Laker took advantage of the opportunity to hear the famous soprano in concert. Emma Lucy Gates and Miss Lucy Van Cott were members of one party greatly enjoying the great treat thus afforded by one of Cornell's favored song birds.

The visit of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Spence, Miss Lucy Spence and Mrs. George F. Felt was of too short duration for the pleasure of their many friends here—five days is too limited a time for sight seeing and shopping. The party left Thursday afternoon for Washington, where they remained a day and a half, and journeyed on to Chicago—another resting place—taking the limited from there to Salt Lake.

Lulu Glaser's popularity with big and little girls was attested at the Chestnut Street theater in Philadelphia after the Saturday matinee, when the walk leading from the street to the stage entrance was literally packed and jammed with a struggling mass of femininity. There were all sizes and ages of girls and they were craning their necks for a view of the lady who romps delightfully through three acts of "A Madcap Princess." Miss Glaser didn't hesitate when she saw the crowd. She just walked ahead and gave the girls the treat they had been looking for.

At Cambridge Court, Forty-ninth street, Rosemary Goss-Whitney is living. Her engagement at Weber's music hall has been a successful one. Other places Mrs. and Miss Louise Wey, the latter a pupil of Mme. Von Klöpper, are pleasantly situated at the Court, and very happy to receive any of their Salt Lake friends. JANET.

The west is changing, according to Frank Daniels, who is now touring that section of the United States. If the west is changing Mr. Daniels ought to know it, for he has been going out that way for a good many years. "The real old western spirit seems to be a thing of the past," said Mr. Daniels recently. "Nowadays you don't see the big forty-niner, with his big white shirt front and his great gold watch chain—that sort that looks as though he might slip a $10,000 bill up your butt if he likes you. Those old boys were the most generous I ever saw, not that any of them gave me $10,000, either, and how they did like the man who made them laugh."

ROOSEVELT'S ATTITUDE TO DEMOCRATS

BEHOLD the authorized statements that President Roosevelt will inaugurate no sensational policies in his settled determination to conduct a beneficent administration, working in a non-partisan manner always toward better government and material prosperity at home and increasing commercial prestige abroad. The following remark was today made by a personal friend of the president:

"More than ever henceforth he will be the president of all the people of the United States, and not the president of a partisan faction."

This cannot be accepted as promising the president will throw away the reins of party control. The overwhelming character of the vote is partial assurance that the president will not be fettered by party prejudices to the detriment of what he considers sound policy.

There were more votes for Roosevelt on Tuesday than there are out and out acknowledged Republicans in this country. There were fewer votes for Parker than there are men who call themselves Democrats. For this reason it is believed President Roosevelt will exercise freedom to appoint a Democrat to office if the Democrat is much better qualified than a Republican recommended by senators and party leaders.

The dinner at the White House last night at which President Roosevelt gathered at the same table representatives of government, capital, labor and of the Episcopal and Catholic churches, was an evidence of the policy he will continue of bringing together in harmonious contact important elements in the life of the republic.

MORLEY SEES TRUE DEMOCRACY.

John Morley, an eminent English author, sociologist and parliamentarian, whom these men were invited to meet, was much impressed with the democracy of the occasion. Secy. Morton of the navy met at this dinner J. J. Hanrahan, who led a locomotive firemen's strike on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, which Mr. Morton "broke" at a cost of $1,000,000. Mr. Morley said today:

"President Roosevelt is the best Democrat we have had in the White House for a long time."

Having declared he will not again accept a nomination, President Roosevelt feels at liberty to do things which before the election would have been called plays for political prestige.

Dr. D. J. Stafford, rector of St. Patrick's Catholic church, in this city, today called at the White House, and asked the president to attend and deliver an address at the dedication of new buildings of St. Patrick's parish. The president accepted. It is a notable fact, without an important exception, the Catholic press of the United States supported President Roosevelt in the last election.

FRIENDLINESS OF CATHOLICS.

The policy of the United States in working in hearty co-operation with the Catholic church in settling the question of purchase of friar lands in the Philippines is believed to have stimulated this friendliness. The president plans to give churches, as well as every man, a "square deal," although without in any sense mixing the affairs of church and state.

Party men who have analyzed the vote find that many different elements voted for Roosevelt with the idea that he was friendly to them. The president regards this as a great claim upon his policies.

Negroes were friendly to President Roosevelt because of his steadfastness in demanding confirmation by the senate of his negro appointees in the south. Hebrews voted for him because he sent to Russia protest against the Kishineff outrages, despite the warning of Russia that it would not be received.

That President Roosevelt's administration was upheld by labor votes in many places was shown by the mixed result in Massachusetts, which returned a full electoral vote for Roosevelt and Fairbanks, but elected W. L. Douglas, Democrat, governor of the state.

There are strong indications that in his councils the president will hereafter frequently consult men who are not politicians, but who represent important influences in various walks of life. He has found that his action on questions like the coal strike, the Philippine friar lands and the Kishineff petition has won him more cordial and helpful support than affiliation with any politicians who might claim to represent labor or the Catholic or Hebrew votes—New York Herald.
