IS IT OUR RELIGION?

NEARDY every visitor who comes to thisTerritory has favorable comments to make upon the flourishing cities and settlements which they pass through on their way to this eity. No topic of conversation is more frequent, and encomiums are freely passed on the thrift, management and Indomitable industry as well as the sobriety, good order and absence of pauperism, everywhere visible. However much visitors may differ from the people of this Territory religiously, however much they may feel opposed to the system under which these labors are accomplished, they nevertheless concede that a wonderful work has been accomplished here, and that the people deserve great credit for their indomitable perseverance and other qualities. It is quite pleasant to hear these expressions, reluctantly extorted as they may be in some instances; for though a people themselves may be fully conscious of the rectitude of their conduct, it is very satisfactory, after being misrepresented for years, to know that the world is compelled to acknowledge that it was mistaken.

There was a time when the popular idea in some quarters about the Latterday Saints was that they were a body of idle, profligate, thisving, murderous outlaws, whose chief occupation in life was brigandage. When we lived in Msssouri and Illinois if a man had read and believed the reports circulated in the papers opposed to us, he would have condraded that our only means of sublistence was stealing from the settlers by whom we were surrounded, and that if this failed us, we would soon fall to pieces. Our enemies were anxious to have It understood that our union was only acommunism of crime, and that the influence of the Prophet Joseph had its whole origin in his superior cunning, shrewdness and duplicity. Our settlement of this country has established mely, that we if no more, as have been able to sustain ourselves without having the settlers of Missouri and Illinois to depend upon. We knew this as well when we lived in those States as we do know, We knew that our people were incomparably superior "to the most of the settlers who lived around us in the qualities of which they declared we were entirely destitute. But though we said so then, we has given us, however, ample vindication in this respect. We have lived down these contemptible lies as well as their authors, and the time is not far distant when the other monstrous inventions, which now obtain current circulation and ready credence in some quarters; will, in like manner, be acknowledged to be utterly false. The remark was made by a United States Senator to one of our citizens expects the general Government will when upon the point of leaving this interfere in his behalf and depose Sencity, one morning this summer, that "if it was not for the Mormons' religion, the nation would be under a debt of graditude to them for the work they have about. accomplished in these mountains." We were not surprised at the idea, but were surprised at its utterance. We have known for a very long time that the religion of the Latter-day Saints is the great barrier in the way of their receiving any credit or equal rights. Yet it is really their religion that deserves credit for all that is done; for if it were not for that, they would not have been here, and if they are in any manner 2 qualities, 14 is their religion which has brought them out. But if any socalled orthodox religious body had done Justice Chase on the bench; Hon. B. what the people of this Tetritory have Stanton for plaintiff, Hon. B. Smith and H. H. Blackburn for the United accomplished, they would have been lauded to the skies and been viewed as great benefactors of their race, and a State Government, or anything else that they would have needed, would Many other people had done one-tenth of the labor and expended onetenth of the money, which have been appropriated by the Catter day Saints for the redemption of the poor, they. We frequently see articles and paragraphs going the rounds of our exchan- ted into the Union. This is the form which charity should assume. It is not true charity to leave a man in helpless ignorance of hew to sustain himself and those dependent upon him, to keep him as a pauper, even though he be fed, clothed and housed; but true charity places the means of redemption within his reach and teaches him how to use those means to the best advantage to benefit himself and the world.

This is the labor which is being accomplished in this country, and it is of more importance to the Republic and to humanity in general than the entire wealth of a nation invested in eleemosynary institutions would be, and the will yet acknowledge that it world

Work is progressing on the gunboats and no officers are in charge of them. The Sunis reporter says the gunboats have not been formally seized, but the parties in charge of building them were notified that the boats must not leave port without the permission of the Gov-ernment.
