Conger moved to strike out the provision allowing any secretary of war to assign any army efficer as professor of law at the academy. There has been a case on exhibition (Whittaker's) made by the officer in charge, in the examination of the colored cadets at West Point, unworthy any officer in the service.
He had instead of looking out for the rights of the persons injured, been a public prosecutor. If this spirit were to continue many people would prefer that the institution should die. It was an amusing spectacle to see government ruled by caste. He cared not whether a cadet had been the author of his other purposes, constantly in store and made to order. Agents for U. S. from the committee. The House then went into com-mittee on the consular bill, which appropriates $1,900,000, an increase of $10,000 over last year, and Singleton spoke on it. In regard to the diplomatic portion of the bill there had been no change whatever made from the law of last year. In regard to the consular service the committee on appropriations had adopted some changes, which had been proposed by the Secretary of State comprising chiefly the transfer of consulates from one class to another. He dwelt upon the importance of the consular service in advancing the communication. of the country, but argued that the utility was neutralized by laws against free ships. Conger referred to the great importance of extending the consular are passervice, but ridiculed the smallness thorities of salaries paid consuls. New mar-kets were opened through the exer-tions of those officers, and the commerce of the country improved, occupants of Birge & Sons' paper though ships were not allowed to hanging works, for inadequate means though ships were not allowed to be bought in England. The American people could manufacture ships against the world, and they were doing it to-day. are at the liberty to fix the place for taking testimony in any particular contest wherever they see fit, and the influence of wellthy speculators or powerful corporations is often exerted in such a manner in this regard as to work a practical denial of justice to poor men, who cannot afford to make long journeys. Representative Page, since his arrival here a fortnight ago, has urged this evil upon the attention of the General Land Office, and at his instance Commissioner Williamson has prepared and issued to day the following circular addressed to all registers and receivers throughout the country:

and existing instructions from this office to require a hearing to be held and testimony taken for the purpose of ascertaining the minerat or agricultural character of land, you are directed to cause such hearing to be heard before a duly qualified officer whose office is located nearest the land in dispute, the distance to be conjuted by the ordinary routes of travel. Whenever a local land office comes within this rule, hearing will be held before the register and receiver. It is intended to cause these hearings to be held, so far as practicable, in such manner as to cause these hearings to be held, so far as practicable, in such manner as to cause these hearings to be held, so far as practicable, in such manner as to cause the least inconvenients to persons interested. South Sea Consulntes. The consular and diplomatic appropriation bill now pending in the House, contains a provision raising the consulate at Apia, Samoan Islands, from the seventh to the fifth class, with an increase of salary from $600 to $2,000 per annum. This change is recommended by the State department to make the position more desirable for men of proper capacity and standing. This consulate is considered likely to become important to our commercial interests at an early day, and there is reason to believe the present incum-bent would already have been dispatched had there been anyone else of requisite ability willing to
