to form a club among the boys who de-precate the use of the baneful article and have them wear badges indicating the cause for which they are fighting. At the Washington school the subject was begun by Mrs. Howard Stowe and at the Webster Mrs. Clesson S. Kinney led the discussion.

The children of the Oquirrh have become suddenly interested in the noble Red Man, and to show the practical nature of their interest, they are adorning themselves after the highly picturesque style or attire for which the Indians are noted. Daily raids are being made on the curlo and notion stores for beads, red, yellow, blue and green paint, and scarlet fever colored flannels; the hen yards of the entire district are being stripped or all stray feathers, and some of the more enterprising children are sending to Los Angeles for ostrich feathers to bedeck themselves withal. It is understood that when preparations are all made there will be a grand parade, with every child gloriously tricked out in an array of aboriginal haberdashery, like ly to drive any Injun into ecs Of course there will have to be a band and a musical aggregation of gongs tom-toms, gourd shell drums, rachet wheels, and such other interesting in-struments of torture, has been organized to lead the procession. The corps of instructors will be provided with carriages and lead the procession and they hope that the governor and his staff can be induced to review the par-

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

A delightful affair was the Easter social given at the First Methodist church last night. Candy and coffee booths were lucratively managed by Mrs. Fraser, Mrs. Hess and Miss Ferguson, and one of the pleasant features of the evening was a program including a solo by Orvie Post, recitations by the Misses Villa and Veria McDonaid, a tenor solo by Dr. Wesley Davis, and a selection by a quartet composed by Miss Damon, Mrs. Greeson, Dr. Davis and R. J. Evans. The reception committee included Rev. Dr. Albritton, Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Honoid, the Misses Mayne, Barker and Sowles.

The first and fourth year classes of the university gave separate partles in the normal building last night, each scoring a distinct success. Class colors formed the decorations, and music, recitations and dancing were the en-tertainment. The university faculty were present and all enjoyed the functions to the utmost.

Mrs. W. Montague Ferry entertained at a pretty luncheon yesterday in hon-or of her mother, Mrs. Georgina Truman, covers Lting laid for 12 guests, allies of the valley, ferns and plumo with bows of green ribbon were effec-tively used in the decorations.
