made very good money just when I was nearly in want of it. I had managed to buy a little stretch of lake shore with the idea of disposing of it as a summer resort. No one was looking for this kind of an investment and I had a real kick on my hands. I happened down there just one breaking up of winter, when I had nothing else to do and no money to do it with if I had. There was a big raft of logs rafted up my beach, and it had been there since the last fall. At least that is the view I took of the situation. It was a bold violation of private rights. Here had they dared to take away my premises without permission? I learned who the owners were in the end and sent them a bill of $100 for dockage. Their reply came through, a representative was wanted to see me for a trial, but I would have no nothing but the full amount. There was a principle involved that I would not sacrifice. He left with the thought that I would never get a dollar.
