SOMETHING TO BE AVOIDED.

A NOTABLE article appears in yesterday morning's Salt Lake Tribune. It is the essence of mildness, and is therefore like an oasis in that sheet, which is usually suggestive of a barren wilderness so far as any considerateness, or amenity toward the "Mormon" people is concerned. This characteristic of the article indicates the sentiment which evidently prompted it. It need scarcely be said that it was not a valorous exhalation. Its caption is (somewhat striking, being "Mob Law."

The reason assumed for the 'penning' of the article was another on the same subject which appeared some time since in the columns of our esteemed cotemporary the Herald. In it the writer took the ground, if we rightly recollect, that rabid anti-"Mormons" were, by their tyrannical measures towards them seeking to incite the Saints to commit overt acts of violence which would give the powers, that he an excuse for stepping in and wiping them out. We agree with the Herald writer, for it would be difficult to put any other construction upon the doings of some of the more virulent crusaders. But, like many other positions assumed by was not the result of unture reflection, because of such an undertaking being exceedingly unsafe all round. The ordinary anti-"Mormon" freeater is desperately anxious to have the "Mormons" consumed in blue-fire, blood and smoke, providing he can stand at a safe distance, rub his hands and gloat over the spectacle, after the manner of the bloody-minded Talmage, who wants Church. For that reason the bloodand thunder advocates are to be found more numerous afar from than near to the centre of contest.

But had the same perfidious wrongs been piled upon any other people that have been heaped upon the "Mormons," the fat would have been in the fire long before now and a furious blaze cide with the refreshing, because most resort to mob violence to right a wrong. timber being heavy east of there, Big 1 hat is not their genius. If it were merely the question of their meeting a mob the matter would take a different phase. But that is not what is pitted against their liberties. unless indeed it be proper to designate their assailants as a species of judicial mob. If it were one of the ordinary color and composition the ground would not long be a matter of dispute. It could be settled with dispatch. But not so the present issue, which comes with the color of law, however alight may be the tint. Had the "Mormons" been subject to incitement to mobocracy they would have arisen in that aspect long since. Still they are but human, and may not be able to endure all things. We love peace, law and order, and always expect to defend their principles. We agree with some of the statements of the article which has induced us to write this. We do not always harmonize with its source. On most things we have no desire to. Upon this, however, there is no questionthat a resort to mob violence would be destructive to the interests of all. It would be universally deplorable and disastrous. Therefore, let those who have been seeking to exaspense the people cease their infernalism, that every shadow of probability may be removed. Our reasons for holding that a mobocratic land consequently lawless attitude would be of no benefit to any class of the community, but the reverse, are beyond reasonable question. Suppose those who have been seeking to incite the Saints to make a lawless outbreal, should succeed, of what benefit would'it be to those who would be successful in its production? What beneficial result could flow from a terrifically destructive storm, carrying devastation in its course? The full force of a human tornado [could not fall upon the "Mormons," but upon these who goaded them to enter upon a disturbance. It has not been fear that has held them in check under the most aggravating circumstances. iIt has been their regard for law and order. We know the Saints well, being conversant with Saints wen, being conversant with their character, and as a body their superiors in personal courses are not to be found on each. Their valor is as much evinced in their forbearance under wrong as it could be in any other situation. The first disastrous effects of a mobocratic outbreak would necessarily fall with terrible force upon its inciters. Subsequently it would rebound upon those who entered upon it, no matter how strong the provocation. But in the returning consequences it would not be likely that the inciters would ever take any part. When suppressed indignation engendered by suffering cruel wrongs finds a tary tornado is scarcely a circumstance to such a whirlwind of human passion as would ensue. And like the raging elements, it carries into its vortex whatever obstacles it strikes. It is no part of the "Mormons" to be of the word. Their motio is peace, having a firm conviction in the final

A workman's lamp ignited a blower of gas in the stope a short distance from the bottom of the shait, and so furiously did it burn that the men were unable to safely combat the flames, and were compelled to take flight. Fortunately there were two ways of escape, one by means of an air shaft, the other through a second opening. When it was found the fire could not be extinguished by applian-ces at hand, the fire department was called out. About midnight the department responded and began flooding the mine with water taken flom the Sosguehanna River, a few hundred feet from the mine. This, however, did not prove to be a very prompt extinguisher. The pumping had to be kept up all night and to-day, and how long it must be continued nobody knows at present. Exploring parties were lowered into the pit this evening, but the fire was so fierce that nothing could be done by them. Present indibut the fire was so fierce that nothing could be done by them. but recovered his composure while the officers were handcuffing him, cooliy remarking that the whole matter was a mistake which would be quickly explained away. On May 5th he was brought into the polic court and the charges against him read. The crown solicitor appeared for the prosecution, Messrs. Napier and Burton for the defense. The latter claimed that the court had no jurisdiction, and after some argument the case was remanded to the 7th, after which it was again remanded to the 11th. On that day the case was again brought up. Consul Gamble was the first witness called. He testified on behalf of the prosecution as to the various articles found in Maxwell's a shirt with two large spots of blood to how these articles, not bearing his name, had come into hif possession, Maxwell said they had been given to him in San Francisco by a man named Robinson. Detective Toohy, one of the two who arrested him on the
