

They were brought before R. C. Camp, and found guilty of misdemeanor, and fines and costs amounted to over $100.

OGDEN, Utah, April 16.—Bishop Wallace of North Ogden died very suddenly at the residence of Apostle Franklin D. Richards last night at 9:15 o'clock. Elder Wallace attended the quarterly conference in the afternoon and while there remarked that he believed he was coming down with pneumonia. After the close of the meeting he accompanied Elder Richards to his home and sat there chatting until 9:15, when suddenly he fell to the floor, gasped and was dead.

Dr. Carnahan was summoned and stated that death was caused by neuralgia of the heart. Bishop Wallace leaves hosts of friends to mourn his death.

At a meeting of the joint city and county building committee held late Friday afternoon it was decided that the stairways throughout the building would be constructed of iron and marble. The architect was instructed to make the necessary changes in the plans, the original designs being that all stairways above the third floor should be of wood. The offer of the Stewart Iron works to do the stairway work for $7,325 was accepted if they would put in private stairways to the fifth floor without additional cost. Mill work was also awarded to the Sierra Nevada Lumber company, Taylor, Romney & Armstrong company and the S. L. Building and Manufacturing company for the sum of $14,800. Some minor business was also attended to and the board adjourned.

EPHRAIM, April 15, 1894.—At an early hour this morning the report spread like wild fire that Magnus Erickson, our city marshal, and Mrs. J. P. Hansen Jr., wife of one of our most beloved and respected citizens, had been locked up during the night, charged with the crime of adultery. Mr. Erickson held the keys to the town jail, and it was there they were caught. Your correspondent called at the city hall and found the report to be only too true. Nothing for years has happened here that has caused such general sorrow, for both are of the best families of town, and both had families of young children at home. They have not yet had a hearing, but the city hall is surrounded with people as the mail leaves, awaiting the result of the examination.

A correspondent, writing from Sevier county, says there are men going through that part of the country selling plain steel ranges with four holes for $76, and taking interest-bearing notes payable next fall. It is stated: "They are telling the people that there are no such stoves to be bought anywhere else in Utah—that they cannot break them with a sledge hammer. They are selling them by dozens. What is the price in Salt Lake of four-hole ranges with small pipe shelves?" The News is also asked to warn the people against being swindled.

The price of a good four-hole range in this city is $56 retail. It costs about $3 more at the place the correspondent writes from. Good six-hole steel ranges cost $65 here. As to warning people, if they are so gullible as to pay an exorbitant price for an article the value of which is easily ascertained, they would not heed warnings.

Mr. David Chidester has returned from a trip to Osceola and vicinity, says the Richfield Advocate. He says the placer mines will be started up there in the near future and a few solid men might get work there. Mr. Chidester says that the Washington Woolen mills have been running all winter to their full capacity, but could not supply near all the demand for goods. There is some misunderstanding between the stockholders and the lessees and the mills will be shut down for a time. He reports the Beaver mills ready to start up. Mr. Chidester says Cedar City is the busiest place in the mountains, and the people there talk of running a railroad direct to Milford, besides the building of a road to the coal beds, and are full of business. The copper plant also in Dixie will soon start up.

A case of woodwork, and the tools used for manufacture, was Monday shipped from the B. Y. Academy to San Francisco, for exhibit at the Midwinter Fair. The work consists of a wreath, a carved lion, brackets, frames, toy tables, etc., and is intended to show what can be done by pupils of the district schools with a few pieces of steel and wood for material and the following tools: Pocket knife, plyers, tack hammer, three-cornered file and a sheet of sandpaper. With these the pupils taught to manufacture other tools for himself, such as a small plane, scroll saws, etc., and such work as above enumerated is turned out. The work at the B. Y. Academy was done by the students of the school under the direction of Professor Townsend, who has charge of the mechanical art department.

Another version of the old, old story, in which man's perfidy and woman's trusting love are leading themes, has just been brought to light. The ruin of a life and a succeeding period of illicit love have earned the wages of sin and closed in death.

In an evil hour, during the month of June of last year, Harry T. Brehmer met the girl whose life-spark went out early Friday morning in fearful agony, and the grave responsibility is laid upon him. Her name is Jane Robinson, and her age 18 years five months. It appears that Brehmer wooed and won the fair young girl, and immediately set about to accomplish her ruin. He was employed as chief engineer at the Hotel Templeton, and she, as well, was an employee there. Environment as well as the girl's faith in him were such that he readily succeeded in his purpose.

On Wednesday night a little girl, was born, with Doctors King and Jones at hand. The youthful mother's agony, it is said, was frightful to behold, and from one convulsion she went into another, until death released her. She died at 3 a. m. Friday, and her remains were taken to Joseph E. Taylor's undertaking establishment.

The American Asphalt company has about completed plans for manufacturing various articles out of the Utah elaterite, or mineral rubber, in competition with vulcanite productions of the East, says the Denver News. Premises on Wewatta street have about been leased, and by July, when the snow goes off the western range, the company will be ready to supply elaterite in any quantity. Elaterite is without elasticity, but is flexible enough to displace rubber combs, brush backs, telephone receivers, electric buttons and other devices that enter into the commercial and domestic life of the nation. The company will employ about twenty hands at the inception of its enterprise, and will increase the number as business develops. Elaterite can be delivered in New York for $30 a ton in competition with caoutchouc at 80 cents a pound. The American Asphalt company controls 300,000 acres formerly owned by the Uintah Indians. A road seventeen miles in length will be built this spring, and then the company will begin shipping its raw material from Kyune station on the Rio Grande Western. The headquarters of the company are situated in Denver and the business is directed by William A. Perry.

Henry W. Hawley, sheriff of Millard county, brought an action in the first district court at Provo against J. S. Giler, county clerk of Millard county, claiming $10,000 damages. The complaint alleges that plaintiff, as sheriff, was authorized by the county court to collect amounts due for licenses throughout said Millard county; that he collected the sum of $30 from W. A. Ray and Alonzo Hinckley on the 15th day of July, 1893, and afterwards turned this amount over to defendant in the presence of Daniel Stevens, county treasurer of Millard county, and defendant thereupon issued to said Ray and Hinckley their license. "Defendant well knowing these facts and maliciously intending and desiring to injure the said plaintiff in his reputation, did falsely state on February 4, 1894, at Fillmore city, in the presence of a large number of persons, the following slanderous words: 'That said plaintiff had procured licenses for said Ray and Hinckley by fraudulently pretending that he would turn over the money for said licenses, and then having thus fraudulently obtained the licenses, kept the money which the said plaintiff had collected therefor.'" Plaintiff claims that these words were uttered to injure his reputation.

The New Mexican (Deming) Headlight contains the following, dated at Casas Grandes, Chihuahua, Mexico, March 15: Wesley Norton, a Mormon boy, residing at Colonia Diaz, was murdered on the 5th inst. near this place.

Norton had been traveling through the Sabinal mining district collecting money for a sewing machine agent of Diaz. It is supposed that he went to a fire built by Mexicans, at Barancas, in a vacated adobe building, to warm himself.

When his back was turned, two Mexicans sprang upon him from ambush and after overpowering the unfortunate boy, pounded his head to jelly and then robbed him of his money, revolver and gun.

The murder was not discovered for several days, but the murderers are known and will be arrested.

The killing occurred about fifteen miles north of Casas Grandes.

The crime was discovered by Joseph
