LIMITS OF RESERVATIONS FOR TOWN SITES.

Proceedings of U. S. House of Representatives, April 13, 1876.

The clause in the bill which was intended to forbid the Territorial Legislature passing any law to dispose of the public lands as if on its own authority, or interfering with the mode by which the General Government should dispose of them, or assuming any authority or jurisdiction in respect of that business, was not intended to deny authority to pass a law which the Territory alone could intelligently enact.

Clearly the position of the defendants on this ground is untenable.

But we are met by still another reason against giving effect to the exception in the pre-emption law. It is that the act of May 20, 1874 (Statute at Large, Vol. 18, page 330) provides for the disposal of three hundred and twenty acres. All that act provides, so far as the matter here in hand is concerned, is that the portion of the public land actually occupied as a town site may, to the extent of three hundred and twenty acres, be sold to the occupants of the same, and that the corporate authorities entered at the proper land office, and at the minimum price, in trust for the occupants. Prior to the passage of that act there was no mode provided for the occupants of such town sites acquiring their titles, except at public sale.

The public lands were then delayed long after a large section of territory had been opened for settlement. This is in order to enable the settlers to acquire the same in the most valuable manner. And these sales are made in parcels of not less than forty acres, and in no case less than one acre. The status of the remaining lands within the corporate limits was untouched. They could not be entered under this act, nor could they be sold to the occupants of the same. It is pre-empted by an individual. The title is then sold on behalf of the defendants against giving effect to the law, that lands within the limits of an incorporated city should not be subject to pre-emption are tenable. But if we look to the policy of the provision, we are led to the same conclusion.

Whenever a town is opened upon the public lands, the lands are reserved for the use of an Indian tribe, when the Indian title is extinguished, the same may be sold, while such lands are held in reserve, population flows up to their boundaries and is there staid; if of course commonly grows more and more dense, so that when the reserve is vacated, the lands have increased in value, and are always eagerly sought after. The other classes of land mentioned in the exception, as for instance those on which are situated any known salines or mines, have some intrinsic value above others.

Now all these classes of lands are excepted from the operation of the act, and for the one common and obvious reason, that being of special value, the Government desires to retain the advantage of their disposal, and is unwilling that any individual, because of a majority of settlement, which certainly can be of but brief duration, should, to the exclusion of others equally entitled, reap the benefits which he did not sow.

This is as true of lands within the limits of an incorporated city as of any other of the classes mentioned in the exception. And it is no answer to this view to suggest that lands thus excluded from pre-emption are not occupied for a town. They are included within its limits by the local legislation because likely to be required for such occupancy. And in this fact and their proximity to the town which give them special value. This very circumstance of their situation brings them into the class of lands mentioned.
