

John the Baptist.

Did He Doubt the Divine Mission of the Savior?

Alma Damer News.

In the Gospel narrative concerning the life of John the Baptist, it is stated that John, in his case, was overcome twice of his disciples to Jesus, for, "Behold the question! 'Art thou that should come, or look for me, another?'" Upon this text some have located the opinion that the mind of John the Baptist had become darkened, as much so that he did not know that Jesus was the Christ. This writer differs from this view, and begs to submit some of his reasons for so doing.

In the first place the parents of John were both righteous before God. It was communicated to them by an angel that they should have a son, in answer to their prayers, and that this son should be filled with the Holy Ghost from the first moment of his existence.

When John was old enough to leave his parents, he went into the desert and remained there under the tuition of those angelic beings whose mission it was to instruct him in all the divine mysteries of the kingdom of heaven and the will of the Father. In the course of time he became an administrator, holding all the keys of power that were on the earth. The keys, the kingdom of heaven, the keys of the kingdom of God, and John, the administrator and John, the administrator of the kingdom of heaven, were in possession of the keys of power at that time.

Jesus in coming to the prophet, that man who was to be sent before him to preach the gospel, said to him, "Behold, I send thee to baptize in the Jordan." John, the evangelist, says that this prophet said, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand; preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins, and that believe on me."

And others were preaching first,

"There went out to him all the regions round about Jordan and were baptized by him, confessing their sins."

He so far outshone his brethren that the people said, "Behold, this is the Holy Ghost, sent after you; Jesus presented himself among the multitude as a candidate for baptism," say John.

"I have need indeed to be baptized of thee, for I am a sinner."
