RESIDENTS OF STAKES

The following report was presented at the late meeting of Zion's Central Board of Trade:

The wool of Utah is various in grade and quality. Many breeders of sheep do not appear to realize the importance of keeping their stock evenly graded, many herds having in them all the varieties known to nature, which speaks unfavorably for the care and intelligence of the breeder.

Pure Spanish merinos are best adapted to Utah, as a stock to breed from, crossing them with Leicester or Cotswold, keeping the herd as near as possible three-fourths merino and one-fourth Leicester or Cotswold. The carcass is then of good size and stocky, and the wool close, long and fine.

Long breeders of sheep import far too many bucks, this being an expensive policy. They should pay more attention to home breeding, as Utah can produce as good sheep as Ohio, Kentucky, Virginia or Pennsylvania, provided we give them the same care and attention.

Utah wool generally reaches the market in poor condition, as compared with those of Ohio, Kentucky and Virginia fleeces. Many of our wool growers can not place their wools on the market in as good condition as they desire, owing to the wildness of our country, but the bulk of the clip could be greatly improved by proper care and honest handling.

Utah wool should reach the market in an unbroken condition, clear of straw, chaff, leaves, bark, stones, or other foreign substances, and the trash and white should be kept separate. Manufacturers and dealers the world over, know the difference between wool and dirt, and Utah spends far too much money every year in paying freight on dirt and rubbish.

Much of the wool exported by Utah loses 70 to 80 per cent. in securing, which makes our present system of exporting dirt very expensive as all fleeces in the dirt are valued at what they will yield in secured wool, quality also being considered.

A secured pound of fine, well bred, healthy wool is, of course, worth more than a secured pound of coarse or weak wool. Much wool in Utah is badly injured by the sheep being allowed to fall into poverty during the winter months, for whenever the growth of wool is checked by poverty or sickness, it dies, and when new growth commences there is always a joint or weak place in the wool, which gives it the name of weak wool, as it does not draw well in spinning and wastes very heavily in working up.

We find also that there is not enough discrimination used by buyers of wool, too often the same with heavy, ill-conditioned wool receive as high a price as they will sell clean, well conditioned fleeces. This however, is gradually giving place to a better system as circumstances are forcing it upon us.

As a rule we find that the wool growers of Utah received fair value for their wool, quality and condition considered. We consider the wool growing industry of Utah, on the whole, in a healthy condition, our country being well adapted for this branch of husbandry, and with the method it has fairly to greatly enlarge its present limits.

We estimate that about 3,000,000 pounds of wool has been marketed in Utah in 1882, about 450,000 pounds of which was grown in Nevada, Wyoming and adjoining territories.

The Work in Europe.—The Mitteleuropäische of September 25th, contains a letter from Elder John Q. Cannon, written at Berlin, from which we make the following extract:

"During the last two months, in accordance with the instructions of President Goos, I have refrained from baptizing in person, he very wisely suggesting that we are the local Elders to do it. We have faith, however, that a better day is coming, and that we will, ere long, have as much liberty as the other and more favored sects, for we assure the authorities that nothing in our preaching will be found violative of law. The prospects of adding continually to our number are very bright, the only slight shadow being the lack of full freedom of movement. The Kingdom of Bavaria, notwithstanding that it is Catholic in religion, seems to be more ripe for the spread of the Gospel than the more liberal and Protestant Kingdom of Prussia. Here the people seem to be perfectly oblivious to all sense of religious duty, and when not openly atheistic in their views, they cling to such incoherent ideas as are equally violative of law."

The issuance of the German Star twice a month instead of once, the publication of new and cheaper editions of our books, and the general prompt and business spirit which President Goos has imparted to the Elders and Saints, are influences beginning to make themselves widely felt, and while unity and love among the branches are conspicuously on the increase, inquiry and a sincere search for light are the gratifying manifestations from the outside world.

I cannot close my letter without mentioning that I, a few days since, had a very pleasant, and I trust profitable interview with Hon. A. A. Sargent, United States Minister to the Court of Berlin. He frankly said he had no sympathy with the object of the "Mormon" mission, but he heartily assured me that any service to assist me to my rights as an American citizen, he would render with pleasure, particularly after he heard my declaration that I did not consider it any part of my duty to act in defiance of the laws of this land, or to disobey any of its regulations.
