fit of proper vaccination.

To the Editor:

I have this to say for vaccination: I believe it proper to vaccinate school children. There are 12,000 attending our city schools. There are twentyfive eminent physicians practicing in this city, who, I believe, would not use anything connected with this operation but the best material, accompanied by proper methods and precaution.

It would require each of the said twenty-five physicians to vaccinate 480 children. If they devoted their entire time to it, they could visit families and possibly attend to the vaccination of twenty-five children each day. That means twenty days of constant and continued labor for the whole corps of able physicians of the city.

I understand that one of the eminent men connected with the board of health has stated that he could vaccinate one every minute, or that one minute was time enough for him to vaccinate one person. Now, it may be truthfully said that it requires five minutes to prepare thet arm for vaccination: First, the arm must be stripped, washed and dried; then the cuticle must be care fully removed by an instrument made antiseptic for each case by being plunged into boiling water and washed with alcohol or ether after the boiling, so that no septic matter may be received from the knife or instrument used to abrade the skin. When all these precautions are observed, then the matter may be taken from the sealed glass tube and spread over place thus prepared and permitted to dry with the arm bared and free from any covering for half an hour after vaccination. By the time the busy practitioner has gone to from five to By the time the busy ten houses in a day and thus properly vaccinated twenty-five children with the balance of his professional labor, he will find night closing in upon him and the hour come for rest and reading, if, perchance, he does not receive a night call to interrupt the closing part of the day's program.

Now, there is one thing I do not fa-vor, and that is the exclusion of children who have not been vaccinated, from our public schools, for the reason that older members of the families from which these children come may have been exposed to the contagion which will be brought home in the clothing, and the clothing of vaccinated children may convey to the school tagion; for the vaccination of the child does not extend to the clothing, and a vaccinated child may carry contagion in its clothes just as deadly as the non-vaccinated To the board of health and the school

The subject was introduced by Councilman Fernstrom, who offered a bill for an ordinance amending section 1, chapter 5 of the revised ordinances. Following this were other resolutions bearing on the same question, and the wordy contest that afterwards took place was maintained with considerable animation.

Fernstrom's amendment reads as follows:

"Be it ordained by the City Council of Salt Lake City that section 11 of chapter 5 of the revised ordinances of Salt Lake City, 1892, be and the same is hereby amended by inserting after the word the effore and before the word 'it' in line 13 of said section the following:

"Provided that compulsory vaccination shall not be enforced by said board of health as a measure of quarantine or otherwise, unless especially ordered by the City Council."

Beatty arose again and said he had intended to say a few words on the question, but Fernstrom's profound knowledge of medicine and his "unan swerable arguments" left nothing for Cottrell could not see the wisdom of passing the resolution at this time. He believed it would be better to wait until the municipal laws committee had reported on Fernstrom's ordinance.

Thomas said to pass the resolution would be virtually slapping the board of education in the face. The board, he felt certain, would turn it down.
