Bad Manners.

There are a few rules, the observance of which would conduce to the good order and serenity that should invariably prevail at public religious assemblies.

Do not make it a rule to go to meetings after the appointed time for commencing services. When you do happen to go late do not make as much fuss and noise as possible, in order to draw the attention of the congregation.

Do not keep up a whispering conference with persons sitting near you in a meeting.

Do not pass slips of paper, in the form of little missives, to others in the assembly.

Do all your giggling in a more suitable place and at a more appropriate time than during the progress of divine service.

Do not get up and go out during the services. It is a mark of disrespect to the speaker.

Breaches of any of the foregoing ordinary rules of decent behavior are plain indications of bad breeding.

Deseret Museum. - Mr. O. F. Due presented two volumes of armorial bearings of Scandinavian families, although not a complete work, it is valuable for reference. Brother Due, when he lived in Copenhagen, was an earnest and intelligent collector of natural and antiquarian curiosities for the museum, several carrels of shells, minerals, stones, relics, and other valuable contributions having been sent by him. The proprietor of the Museum took care to give Brother Due substantial proofs of his sense of appreciation of his merits on his arrival in Utah. And, although Bro. Due had no mercenary intentions in view, when using his energies in the line of collecting, he was, by spending a large portion of his time in collecting in his native country, he had no reason to regret his labors on reaching here.

Specimens of valuable iron ore have been received from Mr. Pascoe, such as is being used in the reduction of silver ores at the smelting works. This ore is said to be abundant, easily obtained, at a claim belonging to Mr. Pascoe, near this city. Mr. A. C. E. Madison, of this city, has presented some shells, collected by that gentleman in California. Bro. Lemmon sent up a specimen of maple from the Cottonwood district. He states that it will be quarried extensively.
