The ants attack books and destroy them but they are not specially fond of thera-trom one side of the cover to the other made by a white ant. The hole is about the size of an ordinary pin and perfectly clean cut. The white ants will start at one end of a row of books in a case and work straight through to the other end, and the course of the hole is as straight and the course of the country, and there eventog it from getting into mitedie. This has no way of exterminating it or pre-ventog it from getting into mitedie. This has no erason why the natives build their houses of mud even where timber is pieu-tiful. The finest houses is the large town work structural work are thickly ov-ored with cement to prevent the boring walk and cellings, are covered with ee-ment. The white ant is a source of consider-able axies from this and all other peets houses from the and all other peets in-cluding the green fly, which of late has been giving a great deal of trouble.
