I do not know what particular fraud the writer of that article is interested in, they are both "great unknown" to me. I was not quite sure that the prospective law was just the thing till I learned from "Formula" that there were no argu-ments against it. Now I trust it will become a law, as there are many rea-sons why it should. All the patent any one can have on any proprietary medi-cine is in the trademark or name, this right the law cannot interfere with. Ninety per cent. of proprieta.y medi-cine is in the trademark or name, this right the law cannot interfere with. Ninety per cent. of proprieta.y medi-cine is known the better for the proprie-toriand the buyer. The more a bad medi-cine is known the worse for the pro-prietor and the better for the proprie-toriand the better for the people. Only the proprietors of worthless medicines will object to this law. As laws are supposed to be made on the principle of the greatest good to the greatest number and as there are more buyers than sellers of medicine, this law should pass. Any person who dis-covers or professes to have discovered anything that will save life and prevent suffering and who withholds this knowledge from his fellow creatures to put money into his pocket, deserves ex-ectation. A regular physician who would do that would be ostracised by the profession the world over. If the makers of proprietary medicines gave anything for the money, they could not accumulate millions of dollars in a short time, as they now do. T move the bill pass and become Wednesday, . Mr. Beecher thinks that Mormonism abroad described by the same words? Mr. Beecher thinks that Mormonism whoud be combatted with the forces of religion and education; and, while we deter these to be insidequate in dealing with certain classes of law breakers, the great preacher can make a very good defence of his position upon fible grounds, and particularly upon the New Testament principle of over-coming evil with good. The Wreeks on the River

Soon after midnight last night the

Soon after midnight last night the citizens were aroused from their simu-bers by the alarm of fire, which broke out on Fifth street between Young and Franklin. The railroad engine scream-ed, the bell at the Court House rang out lustily, guns and pistols were fired, men shouted themselves hoarse and the dismal bell at the new city buildings joined in the general call to the scene of the conflagration. It was the Skat-ing Rink, located between the Catholic Church and the Co-op. Granaries, on the south side of the street. Soon many hundreds of people were as-sembled. The firemen were speedily on the spot, and as soon as water could be had they commenced to play vigor-ously on the flames. It was not long before it was appar-ent that the building was doomed, and in about an hour and a half it was totally destroyed. It was used for dancing as well as skating. It belong-ed to E. Keyes. I did not learn what the loss amounted to, nor has it been discovered how the fire originated. I
