Utah Northern Extension. — In pursuance of their original plan, the Utah Northern Railroad Company are now proposing to extend their road from Logan to Blacksmith's Fork Cañon, thence up that cañon and into Bear Lake Valley, from there being only a short distance over easy grades to the Mammoth coal mines. This is carrying out the original design of the road—that of building a cheap road which should open up and develop all the resources of that portion of the country. It will aid in the great object aimed at by the projectors—that of centralizing all the trade of that country in Utah. Much of the trade of Bear Lake Valley now goes to Evanston, Wyoming. The building of this extension will bring them into real communication with points in Utah, where goods can be purchased just as cheaply, and all that class which is brought from the West much more so. —Corinne Record, March 31.

Reports," "Dress," "Good Manners," "Woman's Voice," "Be a True Woman," "Home Affairs," "Sisters, Be in Earnest," "From Beaver to St. George," "Executive Business," "To Writers and Speakers," "Patience and Perseverance," "Salutary for Small-pox," etc.

Rash and Inconsistent. — An American newspaperman is proverbially rash, generally plunging into the sensation business without regard to the ordinary rules of good sense and judgment. A large proportion of the journals of the country are striking about and wildly beating the air just now, on the subject of Utah and the "Mormons," some covertly and others more openly hinting at the time having arrived to introduce into the drama a profusion of "blatant and blundering" about the "set time" having come in which to blot out "Mormonism," and, as a matter of course, the "Mormons" live so will "Mormonism," "just as if it was a mere trifle to accomplish, and only "child's play" to "blot out," which we presume means to exterminate, somewhere between one hundred thousand and two hundred thousand people and their social and religious institutions! And what for? Is it for doing more toward redeeming to civilization this western portion of America than any other people? Is it for being the best behaved, most law-abiding and industrious people on the Continent, for that is their true character? People who talk about having the "Mormons wiped out," don't think of what they speak, and, in our view, don't at all mean what they say.

Instead of getting kicks and abuse, the "Mormons" are entitled to better things; they are deserving of praise, credit and encouragement for the large amount of good they have accomplished. They have great and serious objections to being "wiped out," "exterminated," or "blotted out," and have not the remotest idea that they are going to be. It is one thing to sit in a newspaper office and blot a worthy, sober and honest people out of existence with a number two Faber, but when it comes to doing that kind of a job in fact, instead of in the imagination, it is quite a different undertaking, and one that, in our view, the world is scarcely prepared either to witness or sanction. At least we hope so, if only for the sake of the world.

WASHINGTON, 2.

When Governor Hampton was informed in advance of the official notification that an order would be issued for the removal of the troops from the State House, he expressed himself much satisfied, but said it was no more than he expected from the principles announced in the inaugural address. He was somewhat interested to know whether the order was to take immediate effect, as he wished to be present in Columbia when it was executed. However, as a precautionary measure, he would at once telegraph to his friends in Columbia his earnest wish that there should be no outward demonstrations, such as a "great disturbance," and he was satisfied his advice would be respected; and, on the withdrawal of the troops from the State House, he would direct that a guard of two unarmed men be sent there to guard it from improper intrusion, and he thought such a force would be sufficient for the purpose. He felt satisfied that the order would be executed without any disturbance, and that the people throughout the State would take courage in the effort to repair their shattered industries. He called his staff together to take leave of the President, and thank him for the withdrawal of the troops, repeating the assurances given in his recent letter that all should share alike in the protection of the law, and no disturbance whatever, and that the people throughout the State would take courage in the effort to repair their shattered industries. He called his staff together to take leave of the President, and thank him for the withdrawal of the troops, repeating the assurances given in his recent letter that all should share alike in the protection of the law, and no disturbance whatever, and that the people throughout the State would take courage in the effort to repair their shattered industries.

Charles Russell, late United States Minister to Venezuela, on his arrival here, visited Secretary Evans and offered to make good the charges which he (Russell) had made against the character of officials of the Venezuelan government. The Secretary of State advised Russell that the charges he proposed to make were not a part of the duty of the American government.

The Secretary of War declined to state when the order will be issued.
