Yes, on February 8th. The witness then turned to the cash books for the purpose of showing the items which go to make up the amount in the statement. Mr. Craig was aske to state the amount deposited at the bank, but Judge Powers objected be-cause the books were in court, and they furnished the best evidence. The county attorney argued that Mr. Craig vas an expert and his evidence competent. The court sustained Judge Powers' objection and the books were produced. Reference was made to the office books, showing the amount re-corded on February 5th. The amount was $30,325.75. The McCornick bank books for the same period shows that $22,325.75 was deposited. In answer to Judge Powers witness said that the station agents reported both to the bank and to Mr. Van Kuran, and that neither the bank nor Van Kuran could tell if the agents made incorrect statements. He said that the entry of $30,325.75 was made by Van Kuran. A. E. Kimball, chief clerk in the treasury office, corroborated Mr. Craig's tes-timony in relation to the making out the report. He assisted Craig in the ex-amination. sleeve and expressed himself as being lelighted to be back once more Lake, "Those were good old days," said, referring to the occasion of his first appearance in this city, "and it is worderful how nearly everyone who was in that company has launched out since then. I think we all have a soft spot in our hearts for Salt Lake, at least I know I have, and no matter where i have been I always have been intercsied in any news from this part of the country. I meet Salt Lake ple everywhere, and it was only the other day I ran across Jim Bloor in Kansas City, where he is managing editor on one of the dailies. Incidental. ly, he told me that the Deseret News had made great strides as a metropoli-tan paper since I was last here. "What have I been doing since I left Salt Lake? Well, when I left here I went back to Philadelphia where played a short engagement, and shortly afterwards I created the juvenile of David in the "Way Down East, later go to New York where we played for 187 performances at the Manhattan. Then I went over to the Broad-way in the Musketeers, to later play my old part in "Way Down East" for 32 consecutive weeks. Last season I played lead in "Women and Wine" at the Manhattan, New York; after that I bought Nat Goodwin's play, "Nathan Hald," and have played it ever since."

In speaking in regard to the play which he will present at the Theater tonight Mr. Kyle said, "Nathan Hale" is away ahead of anything that Clyde Fitch has attempted. Contrary some assertions he did not write this play for Nat Goodwin, but simply duced it as an inspiration with no spe-cial actor in view. He took it to Henry Miller and then read it to Nat Goodwin. As Brady once said to me, 'Fitch you know is a d- dangerous reader.' The consequence was that Goodwin bought the play and produced it. Goodwin is the play and produced it. Goodwin is a good actor, but when the people came to see Nathan Hale and saw Allce Adams, as portrayed by Maxime Elli-ott, Goodwin sald, 'but' and 'ft' and at last played it in New Britain on Thanksgiving Day. From that day we have been well noticed in the press; even in Chicago, which is Nat Good-win's stronghold, some very nice things win's stronghold, some very nice things were said of our production." After playing in this city Mr. Kyle will continue on to Portland and back over the Northern Pacific to conclude his season June 15th.
