THE EVENING NEWS.

Saturday, . . Nov. 21, 1874.

THE LOST SHEEP.

There were ninety and nine that safely lay
In the shelter of the fold;
And one was out on the hills away,
Far off from the gates of gold;
Away on the mountains wild and bare—
Away from the tender Shepherd's care.

Lord, Thou hast here the ninety and nine—
Are they not enough for Thee?
But the Shepherd made answer, "This of mine
Has wandered away from me;
And, although the roads be rough and steep,
I go to the desert to find my sheep."

But none of the ransomed ever know
How deep were the waters crossed;
Nor how dark the night that the Lord passed through,
Ere He found His sheep that was lost.
Out in the desert He heard its cry,
Sick, and helpless, and ready to die.

"Lord, whence are those blood drops all the way
That mark out the mountain's track?"
"They were shed for one who had gone astray
Ere the Shepherd could bring him back."
"Lord, whence are Thy hands so rent and torn?"
"They were pierced to-night by many a thorn."

And all through the mountains, thunder riven,
And up from the rocky steep,
There rose a cry to the gates of heaven,
"Rejoice, I have found my sheep!"
And the angels echoed around the throne,
"Rejoice, for the Lord brings back his own!"

Selling Militia Arms.

THE STATES HAVE NO RIGHT TO SELL UNITED STATES ARMS DISTRIBUTED TO THE MILITIA.

The question submitted by the Secretary of War, whether under existing laws the rights of property in the arms issued for arming the militia of the United States is vested in the state authorities, with power to dispose of them by sale or otherwise, without accounting to the United States, was suggested by facts connected with the quota of arms due under the statutes relating to the arming of the militia of the State of Virginia. It appears that the governor of that State made a requisition upon the chief of ordinance for about 2,307 revolvers, to be drawn as a portion of said quota. To meet those requisitions the latter officer in July last gave to an agent of the State orders upon the manufacturer for that number of revolvers, to be delivered within a short period thereafter. Upon receiving these orders the agent, acting upon the directions of the governor, proceeded to New York, and in behalf of the State entered into contracts with certain parties for camp equipage. It was agreed that the contractors should receive in payment for the camp equipage furnished the state under the contracts an assignment of aforesaid orders, and that the delivery of the arms by the manufacturer should be made accordingly to them. But the chief of ordnance, having information of this transaction, and conceiving that the right of the state to make such disposition of the arms intended for the militia thereof was not entirely free from doubt, directed that the delivery of the revolvers in said order be withheld until that point is decided. The determination of that point has been thought to depend on the solution of the question referred to the Attorney General. After quoting the laws in force which provide for the furnishing of arms to the militia by the general government, as contained in various sections of the revised statutes, the Attorney General says: "In no one of the sections adverted to is there any provision which expressly vests the property in the arms after their distribution in the states, absolutely, nor do I find anything therein upon which such a change of ownership results by necessary implication." For the purpose of getting at the intent and meaning of the existing laws with reference to that point, the Attorney General recurs to the earlier legislation on the subject of arming the militia, particularly to that part of it from which the provisions of the revised statutes have been taken, and after a full review of the various acts of Congress from July 6th, 1798, down to the present time, concludes that in contemplation of those provisions the arms transmitted to the States thereunder are to be held by them for a specific purpose only which is pointed out therein, that they become, strictly speaking, interested with nothing more than a qualified property in such arms, and that they cannot, as a matter of right and without thereby interfering with regulations of Congress on a subject over which its authority is necessarily paramount, make any disposition or use of such arms which defeats the purpose referred to, though, if this should be done, there would seem to be no remedy without further legislation by Congress; and the official opinion is that the states do not by the existing laws have "the right of property in the arms issued for arming the militia," if an absolute right of property is there meant, and that they derive no authority under those laws to sell or dispose of such arms at their pleasure. In regard to the actual case presented, which concerns a part of the quota of arms due the State of Virginia, I may add that the disposition of the revolvers hereinbefore mentioned recently sought to be made by the authority of the State would clearly have been unwarranted by existing laws of Congress on the subject of arming the militia. The arms cannot be indefinitely withheld from the State, the statute requiring them not only to be annually distributed, but to be transmitted to it by the officers of the general government.—Washington Star, Nov. 12.
