

money and walked into the detective's room and sat down. The chief came in a little while and said, "Hurry up. That train leaves in a little while." I went into the chief's office again and went to the train with the McWhiters.

DIVIDED UP THE MONEY.

"The next day we met in Jim Donaldson's room and divided up the money. Eight hundred dollars was set aside for Chief Sheets. Parrent and I took our share and went to the Hamilton drug store. I called up the chief and said, 'Chief, I have got your bit for you. Where will I meet you?' The chief said he would go out the back way and meet me on State street.

"I saw him as he came out the back way and went with him into the little second-hand store and paid him $350. He asked me where the O'Briens were and I told him I didn't know. He said it was a straight 20 per cent proposition with them.

"The next day I met Sheets in front of the National Bank of the Republic. He asked me to get a $2,000 bill changed for him. I went over to Walker Bros. bank and had it changed into twenties. I took the money back and gave it to the chief in the doorway between the bank and the Chesapeake restaurant. That evening I was eating in the Chesapeake and Sheets came in. He gave me the 'office' and sat down and we ate together. I told him about the way the McWhiters game was worked; about the bogus policeman and all.

"I told him the O'Briens were going to work again the next Monday. I said that we had lost several days in this deal and said that what we had paid the chief ought to apply on the hundred a week, and he agreed to it.

SHERIFF WAS 'ON TO' THEM.

"A few days later I saw Alex McWhiters looking over the register at the Sanitarium and recognized him. I called up the chief and said, 'Chief, I have got your bit for you. Where will I meet you?' The chief said he would go out the back way and meet me on State street.

"That night Parrent and I went to Denver. We stayed there a few days and then went to California. From there I went to Kansas City and then to Riverton, Wyo. From there I wrote three or four letters to Sheets. I told him that I would stand the expense of clearing Parrent and told him to get him out of jail if he could. Newton replied to each of the letters. Sheets didn't answer any of them. Newton said nothing could be done for Parrent. I wrote to Sheets and asked why Newton did not send us our paper (notes given by 'suckers') or proceeds from it. I didn't get any reply."

OPERATION DENIED.

County Attorney Willard Hanson has received a letter from United States Attorney David W. Baker of Washington, D. C., in which the latter denies that Mrs. Anna M. Bradley's present condition is due to a criminal operation which was performed upon her in this city shortly before she went to Washington to kill former Senator Arthur Brown. The attorney states that so far as he has been able to learn, no criminal operation was performed upon Mrs. Bradley and she has made no such statement to the officials. Mr. Hanson inquired into the matter with a view to prosecuting the physician who performed the operation.

E. J. SWANER DEAD.

Once Prominent Jeweler Succumbs to Ravages of Cancer.

In the passing of E. J. Swaner, whose demise occurred at 1:40 o'clock this morning, Salt Lake lost one of its first, and at one time foremost, jewelers. Swaner was a few years older than most of the better known men in the city, and his well stocked store at 110 Main street, next to the old Arbogast confectionery, was patronized by the elite of the town. He was considered to be one of the best workmen in his line that ever pined his vocation in this city.

The loving cup presented to Hon. William J. Bryan by his admirers in this state was the workmanship of the hands of Mr. Swaner, as was also the design of Utah's emblem, the Segoe Lily. Swaner was stricken with the ravages of the deadly cancer. The disease started in his mouth, after the extraction of a troublesome tooth. From that time until the end he was a great sufferer, particularly during the past few months, and death was a happy relief. He was born in this city, Sept. 10, 1856, and was the son of Jorgen J. and Julianna Larsen Swaner. He is survived by a widow and several children. Deceased was a member of the A. O. U. W. Full arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed, but will be announced later. The late residence of Mr. Swaner was 318 south Tenth east street.

IN JUDGE DIEHL'S COURT.

Flegal, Alleged Swindler, Escapes On A Technicality—Harris Released.

In Judge Diehl's court this morning Anna Mesich, wife of Stanis Mesich, the Austrian charged with murder, was released on her own recognizance and the decision in her case will not be rendered until tomorrow morning. The woman was accused of stealing a gold pin from Mrs. Appuccello but there is reason to believe that Mrs. Mesich is the victim of a scheme hatched up by certain Austrians who were friends of Herman Obradovich, the man killed by Mesich. I said Joseph Smith, the young man who pleaded guilty to the larceny of a bicycle, was sentenced to 40 days in the county jail.

Nicholas Wilkison, charged with battery upon Mrs. Amanda Richards, was given a trial this morning. The case developed into a neighborhood row, and scores of witnesses were examined for and against the defendant. After hearing all the testimony, Judge Diehl took the case under advisement until Thursday morning when Franklin was arrested on the charge of swindling, was tried this morning, but escaped punishment because of the fact that the complaining witness had not actually paid money to the defendant for the alleged reading. It appears that a companion of the complainant paid money from the surrounding towns, and alleged that the accused had been swindled out of $1, and as the prosecution could not show it the case was dismissed on motion of the defense.

Love Harris, a colored man who was charged with assault with a deadly weapon, has been released on his own recognizance and the case continued without date.

ENTHUSIASTIC GATHERING.

Salt Lake Business Men Hold Meeting At Spanish Fork.

Merchants of the southern part of Utah county met last night at Spanish Fork, to discuss the proposed organization of the Salt Lake Business Men's Association. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. C. Jones, and was attended by a large number of merchants from the surrounding towns. The association was organized for the purpose of promoting the interests of the merchants of the southern part of Utah county, and for the purpose of securing the best possible representation of the merchants of the county in the legislative and judicial branches of the government.

At the meeting, the following officers were elected: President, J. C. Jones; Vice-President, J. C. Jones; Secretary, J. C. Jones; Treasurer, J. C. Jones; and a number of other officers.

The meeting was a very successful one, and the merchants of the southern part of Utah county are confident that the association will be able to secure the best possible representation of the merchants of the county in the legislative and judicial branches of the government.

FAILED TO SUPPORT.

An action for divorce has been filed in the district court by Catherine Countryman against Albert W. Countryman on the grounds of desertion and non-support. They were married at Laramie, Wyo., on April 14, 1933, and it is alleged that defendant deserted plaintiff on Nov. 13, 1934, and has ever since failed to support her. She asks that the court order that defendant pay her the cost of her property be set aside to her as alimony.

ORCHARD WAS A MURDERER

Richardson Declares That He Was Possessed of a Lust for Shedding Blood.

HE STANDS UNCORROBORATED

If Peabody, Goddard, Bell and Others Were Marked for Death, Why Were They Not Killed?

Defendant's Attorney Made Plain Weakness of Argument That W. E. M. Was Employing Orchard.

Boise, Idaho, July 22.—Declaring Harry Orchard was a maniac possessed with a lust for murder—a desire to slay a disordered brain with the blood of this fellow man—Attorney E. F. Richardson, continuing today his plea for the life of William D. Haywood, told the jury today that the defense was ready and willing to admit that Orchard accomplished the taking off of Gov. Steunenberg in the manner described by him on the witness stand.

Richardson asserted that Orchard had a motive against Steunenberg for the reason that Orchard was in the Hercules mine through being driven out of the Coeur d'Alenes.

Of Orchard's story of his many attempts upon the lives of men said Richardson, "I have heard of his attempts upon the lives of men, but I have not heard of his attempts upon the lives of men."

Richardson declared that he was the most absurd thing on the face of the earth. He declared that it would be a long time before the law would be able to put a halt to the neck of his client. He declared that the jury would have to decide whether or not the defense was ready and willing to admit that Orchard accomplished the taking off of Gov. Steunenberg in the manner described by him on the witness stand.

Richardson declared that he was the most absurd thing on the face of the earth. He declared that it would be a long time before the law would be able to put a halt to the neck of his client.

ORCHARD UNCORROBORATED.

Tracing Orchard back to Denver, where he made the second attempt on the life of Gov. Peabody, Mr. Richardson declared that absolutely no corroborative evidence had been offered in support of Orchard's story of setting the bomb under the sidewalk and its failure to explode because of a coal cart driving across the wire.

Richardson declared that he was the most absurd thing on the face of the earth. He declared that it would be a long time before the law would be able to put a halt to the neck of his client.

HAD MANIA FOR KILLING.

"When you consider all the testimony in this case, that you will reach with me the conclusion that this man Orchard was possessed of a mania to go out and kill. Sometimes his lust to go out and kill was so strong that it was almost unbearable. He was strong in his purpose and sometimes wavered. His testimony shows a desultory, maniacal method of pursuing the victims of his death."

Richardson declared that he was the most absurd thing on the face of the earth. He declared that it would be a long time before the law would be able to put a halt to the neck of his client.

RIDICULED MOFFATT STORY.

Richardson ridiculed Orchard's story as to being ordered "to get" David H. Moffatt, president of the Federal National Bank of Denver. He declared that Haywood deposited all the funds of the federation in this bank and was a constant visitor there.

Richardson declared that he was the most absurd thing on the face of the earth. He declared that it would be a long time before the law would be able to put a halt to the neck of his client.

SUIT TO ACQUIRE DEED.

Parley Anderson Seeks to Secure Possession of Salt Lake Real Estate.

Parley Anderson has filed suit in the district court to compel Neph W. Clayton and Sybilla W. Clayton to execute a deed in his favor to certain real estate in this city valued at $2,500 and also to quiet his title to the property as against W. J. Lawver and Leslie L. Goddard, who claim some interest in it. It is alleged that plaintiff entered into a contract with Clayton on Aug. 15, 1935, whereby the latter agreed to convey the property to Anderson by warranty deed but they have so far failed to do so.

attempts he said he had been hired to make, for the purpose of inflaming the minds of the jurors. Mr. Richardson said that while every state is expected to take care of the crimes committed within its borders, Colorado cannot do so while her dirty linen here for you gentlemen to wash.

KILLING OF STEUNENBERG.

Coming again in the course of his argument to the death of Gov. Steunenberg, Haywood's counsel said the defense was ready and willing to admit that Orchard committed the deed exactly as he described it.

Richardson declared that Gov. Steunenberg's immense stature and the freedom with which he went about the country made him a shining mark for assassination.

"He could have been shot by anybody able to hit the side of a barn," said the attorney, "and Orchard himself told you that Steunenberg each week took long drives to the sheep camps across plains where he could be seen and be a mark for a rifle bullet. I tell you there was a week in his life that he could not have been safely killed, had there been a desire for his taking off in anything but a spectacular manner. I say to you again Orchard had planned the crime and for committing crime in a way that would be sure to attract attention."

ORCHARD COURTED SUSPICION.

Mr. Richardson said that when Orchard came to Idaho to kill Gov. Steunenberg he seemed to so order his movements that the absolute of suspicion would constantly point at him. After stalking the governor for several days he apparently abandoned the mission on which he says he was sent.

"Did he have a cold? No. There is no claim here that Orchard has feeling of any sort. He sat here and told his story remorselessly, without a word of contrition or feeling for his victims. I tell you there was working in that maniacal mind the proposition of glutting his desire with the killing of Steunenberg. But he wavered and went away to Portland only to return later and accomplish his purpose when the fires were fanned into a brighter flame."

Richardson then took up the connection of Jack Simpkins with Harry Orchard. "Orchard tells you himself that neither Haywood, Moyer nor Pettibone suggested that Simpkins should be killed," he said.

"Now I will say to you, gentlemen, that if I had been here in 1906, if I had been incarcerated in the Idaho penitentiary, I would have been practicing upon the prisoners in that bullpen; if on the 30th day of December, 1906, Gov. Steunenberg had been assassinated and I had connected with that fact the time I had spent in the bullpen, if I had added the fact that I was a member of the executive board of the Western Federation of Miners, I would have done, and I believe you would have done, exactly what I have done. Jack Simpkins would have fled to cover to preserve your liberty."

SAYS ORCHARD HAD A MOTIVE.

Orchard said Mr. Richardson was a man who had a motive against Gov. Steunenberg. It mattered not whether he had decided away his property before his execution prior to his leaving the Coeur d'Alenes or not. The thought was always going through his brain that he would have been a rich man if it had not been for Steunenberg. This thought was expressed to many witnesses and Richardson denied that those witnesses were lying or that the circumstances point to anything but the absolute truth of the testimony. Richardson reviewed Orchard's movements just prior to the killing of Steunenberg and said his strained financial condition, when he had been reduced to the necessity of robbing a cash register, of burglarizing a railroad station and borrowing money from a friend, gave the lie to the story that the federation was paying for the crime and that he could get money whenever he desired.

Turning again to Jack Simpkins, who suffered indignities in the bullpen, which might be urged as a motive for his execution, Richardson declared that men's animosities did not increase with the passing of years, but generally died out. Simpkins had plenty of opportunity before the killing of Orchard to kill Steunenberg had he so desired.

GENERAL BELL HERE TODAY

Chief of Staff of American Army On a Trip of Inspection Of Army Posts.

Major General Franklin Bell, chief of staff of the United States Army, is due to arrive in this city today, on a trip of inspection of the army posts throughout the country. He was at Fort Duchesne Sunday, with Fort Douglas next on his list. General Bell graduated from West Point in 1878, the same year that Secretary Taft graduated from Yale, and served through his captaincy in the Ninth and Seventh cavalry regiments. He was jumped over the intervening grades to a regular to a brigadier generalship in 1901, and later was made major general.

His record as colonel of volunteers during the Spanish war was the means of his rapid promotion. General Bell said word that he would come unannounced, and only the actual necessity of formalities will attend his arrival and departure at Fort Douglas. He comes here on the same errand as did General Chafee several years ago, to learn by actual observation of the conditions of the post, and prominent men are talking of an interview with him, to present their views as to the much talked of enlargement of Fort Douglas to a Brigade Post.

THEY SAW VAST DEPOSITS OF COAL

Salt Lakers Are Enthusiastic Over the Fuel Outlook in Teton Basin.

LINE IS TO BE BUILT SURE.

Spencer Clawson Says That If Oregon Short Line Will Not Other Parties Are Ready.

With the return of the rest of the party of business men who went to Teton valley on Friday to inspect the vast deposits of coal in the district comes the information that if the Oregon Short Line will not build the branch line into the district private parties will.

Among those who returned this morning was Spencer Clawson who thoroughly investigated the proposition and he, together with other members of the party are enthusiastic regarding the outlook.

"I saw more coal in Teton valley," he exclaimed, "than the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line can burn in 50 years. These deposits have been known to exist for years this is the first occasion that the Oregon Short Line has taken official notice of them. It is also interesting to note that there are others in that section looking up the prospects. Mr. Perrine, representing Pennsylvania coal capitalists, is among those who are on the ground."

SIX BIG SEAMS.

"During our trip we inspected a series of six seams of coal. The first encountered was at Horseshoe canyon, where there is a three-foot vein. At the Brown Bean mine a little further along there is a five-foot vein and the main seam is developed at the depth of 400 feet.

"At this mine there is 1,500 tons of good coal in the bin while there is a piece weighing three tons which is to be shipped for exhibition at the Fair at Denver. The vein in which this is taken can be traced for two and a half miles.

"We followed the croppings over the mountain and on route were shown a 20-foot and a four-foot vein. Over the ridge is located the Horseshoe mine where at a depth of 100 feet a 10-foot vein of as good coal as there is in this country is exposed.

RESOURCES APPARENT.

"The resources of this section were made so apparent on this trip that if the Oregon Short Line does not build the road private people will undertake the proposition and construct a line to tap this abundant fuel supply."

Mr. Clawson is limping painfully from the effects of a crunched leg contracted while endeavoring to get out of the way of the runaway team that was responsible for the Ashton accident.

Spencer Clawson, who was with the horses rushed alongside of the rig in which Mr. Clawson was being driven by James Sheets, a former Salt Lake, this frightened the team, and in a twinkling of an eye the horses were running. Sheets held on to the lines and kept the horses in the road, but missed a bridge over a creek by a wheel and a half. Fortunately the buggy was going at such a rapid pace that it did not tip over. In trying to save himself, Mr. Clawson wrenched his leg badly.

AMUSEMENTS.

Orpheum—The bill at the Orpheum this week is a doubleheader, "Turned Up," the main attraction being preceded by a one-act playlet, "Barbara," from the pen of Jerome K. Jerome. It is rather a pretty little piece, and is creditably performed by the Misses Anita Hendrie and Priscilla Knowles, and Messrs. J. W. Bennett and Luke O'Connell.

"Turned Up" is one of the most excitingly funny things seen at the Orpheum this season. It fairly teems with wit and humor, and serves to keep the house in a continuous roar of laughter. Al Phillips and Miss Lucia Moore assume the parts of George and Sabina Medway, brother and sister, who arrive in the city on a short visit to the supposed death of their father. The latter, followed by a woman who claimed to be his wife, and then the situation becomes so mixed that it seemed impossible ever to unravel the knarled knots. All the members of the company are cast in good parts, and the work of each was kept up to the standard that has characterized the entire engagement. This is the last week that the Orpheum Short Line company will be seen here. What happens next will be put on for Monday evening, July 25, for one night only, and then the house will be dark until Aug. 12, at which time a return engagement will be given, to continue throughout the following season.

CHIEF CLERK SMITH RETURNS.

Chief Clerk C. K. Smith, of General Manager Bancroft's offices, has returned from a pleasant vacation trip to southern California. He visited Santa Catalina Island where he reports having caught a tuna that weighed 300 pounds. Mr. Smith was photographed standing proudly beside the great fish with hook and line in hand in truthful attestation of the achievement.

LATE LOCALS.

Governor Will Entertain—Gov. Cutler will entertain the officers of the Twenty-ninth Infantry at Saltair next Saturday.

Nelson Residence Sold—The Nelson residence at Eleventh East and First South streets has been sold to Max R. Brothers of the Warm Springs, for $11,000. The property is 75x130 feet.

Will Meet Thursday—The directors of the State Fair association will meet Thursday afternoon, to consider methods of advertising the next state fair, and to discuss the erection of another building.

Leaves for Great Britain—A farewell entertainment was given last evening, in the Fifteenth ward assembly hall in honor of Elder Marvin O. Ashton who leaves on a mission to Great Britain.

Pocket Books Posted—Mail Carrier Lambourne found in a mail box yesterday, two pocket books containing papers and a railroad ticket which the owners can recover by calling at the postoffice. What money there might have been in the pocket-books had been abstracted.

Halloran Returns—W. J. Halloran returned last evening, from his protracted trip in the east where he says business is booming and factories are unable to keep up with their orders. He reports much eastern inquiry about Salt Lake, and thinks judicious advertising now will do it much good.

Funeral Notice—The funeral services of Mrs. Bella Tarbet, mother of Alexander Tarbet, will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at St. Mary's cathedral where requiem mass will be celebrated. Interment private. Friends are invited to the services. No flowers.
