PERSECUTION IN SWITZERLAND.

The spirit of anti-Mormon persecution is being exhibited in the Republic of Switzerland. So we learn from a private letter from Elder Frederick Schoenfeldt, President of the Swiss and German Mission. The communication is dated Dec. 10th, 1884, and states that he and Elder Hockstetter had each been sentenced to pay a fine of 400 francs, with the alternative of imprisonment in jail for 45 days, the incarceration to begin on December 21st, five days subsequent to the date of the letter.

It appears that this action was the result of the operations of apostates from the Church, and the charge was a novel one, being on account of the Elders not preaching polygamy, it being claimed that in refraining from advocating that doctrine they deceived young girls into emigrating to Utah, there to be forced to marry into that order of matrimony, which is the very worst of the world. Had they preached the doctrine, doubtless the charge would have been directly the opposite of the one that was planned, so the trap would probably have sprung no matter which course had been taken.

The persecutive spirit is fanned by the fact that the U. S. Consuls invariably refuse to interfere for the protection of the Elders as soon as they discover they are "Mormons," and the Swiss Circular issued in 1879 for the purpose of placing an embargo on "Mormon" emigration, still has an effect in the same direction.

The two Elders who were placed under sentence had the privilege of an appeal from the decision of the authorities of the Canton Aargau to the "Bundesrat," Federal government, which has hitherto acted with much more liberality than the local courts. In the existing state of public feeling, however, Elder Schoenfeldt considers it likely that if an appeal were taken, the general government would change its previous generous policy and adopt one more restricted and rigorous by taking steps to limit the number of Elders emigrating. Such an attitude by the heads of the Republic would shut the Gospel out from the entire country, and rather than risk the assumption of such a stand, it has been deemed wise to let the matter rest in a Canton capacity.

Elders Schoenfeldt and Hockstetter had also concluded not to pay the fine, and there seemed to be no other prospect than that they should go to jail for 45 days, beginning on the 21st of December, so that while their friends were having a pleasant time surrounded by the friends and relatives and home comforts, they were in all probability reclining within the walls of a prison, subsisting on exceedingly hard fare, surrounded by associates of the most unbecoming type.

But such is the missionary life of a Latter-day Saint, whose devotion and self-denial for conscience sake is phenomenal in these days of hardness and self-indulgence. Such is the reward he receives at the hands of his fellows, for whom he entertains no sentiments but those of a kindly character. Such is the treatment bestowed upon those who are everywhere acknowledged and home comforts, they were in all probability reclining within the walls of a prison, subsisting on exceedingly hard fare, surrounded by associates of the most unbecoming type.

MISS EMILY FAITHFUL AS AN ANTI-MORMON LECTURER.

MANY of our readers will probably remember that Miss Emily Faithful of England, visited our Territory some months ago and was kindly entertained by many Latter-day Saints. While here she expressed herself as being favorably impressed with what she learned of the people, socially and morally at least, and as being in sympathy with them in the persecution they were subjected to because of their religion. She also announced her intention of writing a book on her trip to America, a good share of which would be devoted to a consideration of the "Mormon" question, and the ideas she received while here upon the subject were so favorable to the "Mormons," that she found no difficulty in getting orders for it beforehand. The book in time appeared, and its scandalous and unreliable nature, at least so far as that part relating to the "Mormons" is concerned, is such as to disgust not only the "Mormon" readers, but every other who is at all acquainted with the subject and has any regard for the truth.

Those who have seen or learned of her book will not be surprised to learn that Miss Faithful is now seeking a territory in her native country, by traveling about delivering anti-Mormon lectures. Nor will they be surprised to learn that she is a reckless and run-of-the-mill character, as the usual run of her class.

It forbids our accusing a lady of wilful lying, and to repudiate the assertions she has made with the truth upon any other theory, we can only claim that she has a wonderfully bad memory; that her powers of observation are very unreliable; and that she has a very lively and fancy imagination, which betrays her in the narration of personal conversations and incidents that never occurred; that she has been most woefully "stuffed" by some unscrupulous anti-Mormons; and that she has never made the slightest effort to learn from a reliable source the truth about the subject upon which she attempts to lecture. A few extracts from the published account of a lecture recently delivered by her in Manchester (which is essentially the same as delivered in many other cities throughout England) will serve to show our readers the nature of her efforts:

"In the opinion of those best fitted to form an unprejudiced and independent judgment Mormonism was founded upon a carefully organized and speculation scheme. The land 'flowing with milk and honey' was what the Mormon agents had ever promised to the land of the converts, and everywhere their spies had gone forth to search for fertile places in the west where they might build cities and plant vineyards. Of course to avail themselves of these advantages people must embrace the Mormon faith. For the most part the doctrine of polygamy was carefully suppressed till the promised land was in sight, and retreat was impossible. Ignorant people drawn from English, German, the rural districts of Scotland, Wales, Sweden and Germany, gratefully accepted the land as the generous gift of the Mormon Church. Instead of realizing the 'flowing milk and honey' which had been promised, they were required to pay the heavy tax imposed by the Mormon hierarchy—a tax which produced such a splendid annual revenue for the support of the Church. The English headquarters of Mormonism were in Liverpool, and there was a great annual depot for the sale of the Bank of England, from which all the expenses of converts were paid. The last time of the last census, out of the 27,000 recruits who were supposed to find that Great Britain had furnished 20,000. How far Her Majesty could protect her subjects in this direction, as some of the Americans suggested, she could not undertake to say.

If Miss Faithful had taken the trouble to enquire of any who had listened to the "Mormon" Elders preach, she might have learned that most of the assertions here made are the very opposite of the truth. So far from inducements of a worldly nature being held out for people to become "Mormons," they are invariably given to understand that they must expect persecution, to have the whole world arrayed against them, to have to sacrifice everything for the Gospel's sake, and to make their way by their own exertions, with God's help, without looking to the Church for assistance. After relating a story of scandal about the nature of religious services in Utah, etc., the lecturer said:

"Many a poor soul had bravely tried to bear with silent submission the dreadful infliction of a second wife, but although trained to resign, she sacrificed as a religious duty, and a means of exalting the husband in the Kingdom of Heaven, many a victim had told her that she had asked with breaking heart how a merciful God could ever have implanted such feelings in her nature only to torture her, and to require her to crush them out of the being of the man to whom she had freely yielded all the freest affections of her youth."

Of course, as may be expected, plural marriage is the main thing against which she rails, and which she denounces unsparringly. She is not willing to believe that it is possible for a woman to find happiness in such an order of things; but seeing that Miss Faithful has never married at all, it might be doubted whether she is the most competent person to judge of the matter. Suppose one out of the 2,000,000 females in Great Britain who are unable to find husbands through the preponderance of their sex and the indisposition of men to marry, chooses to marry a man who already has a wife, and all parties concerned are agreeable to it, who is injured by it? Is it not reasonable for her to have the privilege to so elect as it is for Miss Faithful to live in violation of the command of God—"Be fruitful and multiply"?

The lecturer testified to the fatality of past efforts to destroy "Mormonism" by saying:
 "It was hoped that the Gentile influence, missionaries, and schools in Utah would have disposed of the difficulty, but they have failed. The Gentile influence has failed to uproot polygamy. The school which was expected to years ago was said to be the beginning of the regeneration of Utah. The death of 'King Brigham' was supposed to have been the end of the matter, but the present time shows more than 200,000 Mormons in Utah and the neighboring States."

If Miss Faithful were wise she would regard the past experience which she repeats as the index of the future and instead of being found advising for the destruction of this "marvel of the nineteenth century," she would say as did one of our old and true friends: "If this counsel or this work be of man, it will come to naught, but if it be of God, it cannot overthrow it."

A PLAIN QUESTION.

THE following from a resident of East Mill Creek was handed in this morning:
 "Late in the present, a person was arrested and tried on a charge of disturbing the peace, by reckless driving on a horse and running over a boy. In the trial the boy testified the horse ran against him. The defendant claimed that when he saw the boy he could not prevent his horse from running against him, although he tried his best to do so. The justice, not being able to find anything charged in the complaint which would come under the head of disturbing the peace as defined in the criminal code, decided against the defendant for committing a nuisance, and fined (2023) Sec. 2nd, page 111, Com. Laws, Utah. Even if the defendant is defined in the law, was not proved against defendant.
 "Question: Was the Justice right in his decision in finding defendant for a crime he was not charged with. The opinion of the News on points of law is highly regarded in the territory, and is desired on this point by all parties."

We know nothing of the merits of the case referred to. But the question can be readily answered. If a person is tried before a Justice of the Peace, and the charge is not sustained, the case must be dismissed. He cannot be found guilty of any offense not specified in the complaint. If there is reason to believe that he has committed some other infringement of the law than that defined in the complaint or charge, a new charge or complaint of a sufficiently specific character to place the accused on his defense by informing him of the nature of the accusation, is indispensable.

She has now appealed. The ex-Sheriff fell in love with Miss Kentner, but as the union between them was opposed by Miss Kentner's family and the ex-Sheriff's father, an agreement was agreed upon. Miss Kentner went to the ex-Sheriff's father and agreed to marry him, and waited there several days, but Brauer did not appear, and she was released. The young lady returned home and found Brauer had married another.

Enforcing the Game Laws.

On New Year's Day three young men of Logan went hunting deer, and succeeded in killing two. Sheriff W. W. Crockett, learning of the fact, proceeded against the violators of the game law, and the chief one—the sheriff's own son—was fined $20. The deep snows in the mountains are driving deer down into the valleys, where they are great temptations to hunters, but the Sheriff is determined to enforce the game law, and the fact of his proceeding against his brother shows that he means what he says.

Married.

"Veritas," a Draper correspondent, sends us an account of a marriage which occurred on the last day of the year, in the Logan Temple, between J. D. Wadley, son of Joseph Wadley, of Pleasant Grove, and Miss Roma Bauls, daughter of John Bauls, of the same place. The ceremony was performed by Draper; also a description of the reception which was held in honor of the event at the residence of the bride's parents, on the 2d inst., and attended by about seventy guests, which has been a very enjoyable affair. The bride was a very lovely girl, and the wedding was a most successful one. The bride and groom were both very happy, and the wedding was a most successful one.
