

UTAH WINS PRIZE FOR FINE GRAINS

Awards at A.-Y.-P. Exposition at Seattle a Credit to The State.

WINNER IN MANY CLASSES.

General Howe Enumerates Medals Coming Here From the Big Western Show.

Gov. Spry has been apprised by W. H. Howe, director general of the Utah exhibit at Seattle, that this state has won the grand prize for grain and seed of all kinds, as well as gold medals and other awards on its educational exhibit, at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition. The notification came by wire, and was a welcome piece of intelligence to Gov. Spry and the people of the state. The list of awards made to Utah and the business concerns of this state is as follows: A letter received by the governor from Mr. Rowe yesterday, and is as follows: State of Utah—Grand prize, best arranged exhibit. State of Utah—Gold medal, concentrating mill. Utah Copper company—Silver medal, gold and concentrating mill product. Utah Consolidated company—Silver medal, gold and mill product. Utah Consolidated company—Gold medal, sugar and molasses. State of Utah—Gold medal, exhibit of gold fruit. Ingersoll Brick company—Bronze medal, building brick. State of Utah—Silver medal, salt. Independent Coal company—Honorary medal. Utah Coal company—Bronze medal, bituminous coal and coke. State of Utah—Gold medal, Utah onyx, soap, canning company—Gold medal, asparagus and beans. LIVE STOCK CONVENTION.

American National Association Issues Call for Denver Meeting.

The American National Live Stock association has issued a call for the thirty-third annual convention to be held at Denver Jan. 11-13 next. The circular reads:

"The result of this last tariff revision, and the complete domination of the stock raiser in the various schedules, shows the vital importance of better organization among the live stock men, not only of the west, but of the entire country. The duties on live stock, meats and other agricultural products have in the past been almost entirely nominal, as this country is a net exporter of such products. It is therefore in the distant future that we may expect our rapidly increasing

Dyspeplets

Sugar-coated tablets, quickly relieve Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Nausea, Wind in the Stomach, Headaches, Sleeplessness arising from Indigestion or Dyspepsia. They are composed of the best digestives, carminatives and correctives, and are agreeable and economical. Put in three sizes, 10c, 25c and 50c. Sold by all druggists, and sent promptly by mail on receipt of price by C. I. Hood Co., Mfg. Chemists, Lowell, Mass.

population, the United States will be able to consume substantially all the agricultural and meat products it produces, and when that time comes, undoubtedly the demand will arise from the north to remove all these present nominal duties on agricultural and live stock products, and we must be better organized to protect our interests. Our live stock industry stands for a fair and impartial distribution of the burdens or favors of the tariff, and objects to the manufacturing east dictating and obtaining all they desire in the way of duties, at the expense of the producers. It is not unlikely that the tariff may be an important issue in the next Congress. At such events, this subject will come up for full consideration at our next annual meeting."

TOO MANY BOSSES AT THE POLICE STATION

Detective Wheeling Takes it Upon Himself to Order Prisoner Turned Loose Contrary to Promises.

The Salt Lake police have again displayed remarkable acumen in liberally turning loose a prisoner who had been turned over to them for safekeeping. W. E. Jack, the station agent of the Oregon Short Line at American Fork, it is said, was caught stealing railroad tickets and express packages. When Jack came to the freight depot here to get his time check a few days ago, he was promptly placed under arrest and lodged in the city prison, pending his further disposition. Chief of Police Barlow promised that Jack would be held for a few days, but when, for some unknown reason, took it upon himself to countermand the chief's order, with the result that Jack calmly walked out of the police station and safely made his getaway.

FUNERAL OF VILATE PEARL.

Speakers Pay Tribute to the Virtues of the Deceased.

Well attended services were held yesterday afternoon at the funeral of Miss Vilate Pearl in the Farmers ward meetinghouse, with Bishop Henry F. Burton presiding.

Among the many in attendance were Elders Orson F. Whitney, George P. Richards and Rudger Clawson. Joseph W. McMurrin represented the seven presidents of seventies, and Angus M. Cannon also occupied a seat on the stand.

After music by the choir, prayer was offered by Bishop A. H. Woodruff of Salt Lake, in tribute to the deceased was then read by Miss Mary Anderson of the Primary association, of which Miss Pearl was a member.

The eulogies were read by Elders Orson F. Whitney, George P. Richards, Bryant S. Hinckley, and Bishop Burton. Miss Mabel Cooper sang, "Some Sweet Day," and Mrs. Edwards sang "Some Day We'll Understand." Elder Whitney, the final speaker, made touching allusions to the gentle virtues of the deceased who had lived according to the law of God and kept his commandments. By the celestial law we meant to live by every word proceeding from the mouth of the Lord, and the opportunities to live in the light of such a law will never be curtailed. Excellent music was furnished by a quartet and interment followed in city cemetery.

Uncle Eph on North Pole Controversy

"This business of getting to the north pole is easy enough if you only know how to tell when you're there," said Uncle Eph as he lay down the paper. He had been reading and wiped his glasses with his pocket handkerchief. "Not anybody can find the pole now-days, but the trouble is to tell when you've got there. That the pole don't show much who visits it is shown by the fact that Peary went there a year after Cook first set eyes on it. The pole must have been somewhat surprised, though, at the visitation of Peary when he arrived. Now Cook, you know, went up into the north as you know, every day American citizen, without any knowing of trumpets and a couple of Eskimo and without a change of socks. Arctic travelers say that a change of socks wouldn't do you any good at the pole, anyhow, as the men you have are frozen to you, and you couldn't change if you wanted to, and then it isn't so necessary, any more in those latitudes.

"But as I was saying," Mr. Cook just went up to the pole and unintentionally landed without intention of giving offense or huttin' the pole's feelings—which was most apt to be pretty tender at the first sight of a human being after all those years of standin' all alone in the cold, cruel world—Cook seemed to appreciate just about how a self-respectin' pole would feel under the circumstances and just friendly-like he went up an' stuck his hand and said, 'How-do, N. Pole. Esq. I'm turrible glad I've found you. How are you after all those long years?' Now that's the way Cook did it."

"But what about Peary? Did he put on a friendly smile and stretch out his hand in fellowship to the Pole of the North when he first seen it? Not by a dern site. Peary he just pulled his fur coat together an' tightened up his belt another notch an' clapped his ear muffs down tight an' drawin' his sword exclaimed: 'I command you to surrender in the name of the United States of America!' an' when the pole refused to bow, he up an' shot his Eskimo valet an' an' sawed off a chunk of the top of the pole, an' him a standin' by all the time dictatin' to an imaginary scribe his message of congratulation to the president of the U. S. on his successful annexation of the north pole."

"That's the way Peary done. It reminds me of the time that two of our great admirals went out on the rain' main, right the Spaniards. One of the admirals met the enemy com' out of Hondo harbor, and with his good ships an' the assistance of Captain Clark of the Oregon he sunk the Spanish fleet. Well, what happened? The man that done the fightin' was com'mandin' because the other admiral was attendin' to the social functions attachin' to his great office a-drinkin' tea down to a Cuban Kensington party. But what did the fightin' admiral say after he wiped the Spanish armada off'n the earth? Why, he just sat down and wrote a message sayin', 'We met the Spanish boats an' sunk 'em.' That's what he said."

"But what about the handsomely equipped society admiral; what did he do? When he heard the news of the sinkin' of the fleet, he was eatin' down the Cuban coast to see where his dern ships had gone to. Well, when he found out what they had gone an' done, he set down in his stateroom an' dictated the followin' message: 'To the president of the United States: I have under my command and takes pleasure in presenting you with the Spanish war ships as a Fourth of July gift. That's what he said. Yes, and what Schuyler done that day Sampson took the credit for."

"Which brings me back to what I was sayin', that it's easy enough to be to the pole if you only know when you are there. The main thing is to know when you're there. 'N there's a sure way of tellin' too, according to what I just been readin'. All you've got to do is to have either a sextant or a theodolite along with you, an' you can tell every time just when you've reached the pole. You've simply got to have a sextant, according to them astronomer fellows; or if you haven't got a right good sextant, a theodolite will do. In fact they say a theodolite is preferable even to a sextant, but a brim's No. 6 sextant is all right for tellin' you when you are at the pole. The trouble with a sextant is that you have to hold it in your hands while you tell the time by it, an' a theodolite you can just lean up against the pole an' stand it on a chunk of ice while you're keepin' your hands in your pockets to keep 'em warm during the astronomical calculation. In the old days people didn't have nothin' but sextants, an' it's a fact that since theodolites come out they have been discoverin' the north pole more often."

"To successfully tell when you are at the north pole, you've got to know how much horizon you've got under the sun at noon. You know the sun gets up on the morning of March 1 up in the pole region and looks around for six months never settin' at all during the whole time. The only way to tell when it's night is to notice when you begin to see an' you think it's about 10 o'clock in the evening, but the sun is still shinin' an' you have to cover up your head in order to go to sleep. Well, when you want to measure the horizon beneath the sun, you just look through the telescope in your sextant while standin' on the pole. You look into a little mirror set a little ways away from the end of the telescope, half of the mirror being lookin' glass and the other half being just plain glass. An' here the difficulty with a sextant comes in. If it happens your hands are a little cold, which they are apt to be in those latitudes, especially in the morning an' late in the evening, your hands will shake an' you are likely to read just a little too much or a little too little horizon, an' you might think you are a hundred miles away when you are standin' right there all the time. Now the images reflected in the mirror is given back by your colored glasses attached to the sextant, and includes two stars which you are supposed to see in the polar regions. These being reflected in the horizon glass, you then look down at the index on the upper end of your alidade, just forward of your eye, and see a colored glass. You must be sure your alidade is in good working order, for I can tell you a great deal depends on the alidade. When your mirrors and colored glasses and all dade an' all is all plumb an' workin' fine, then you've got to turn to your microscope an' read your Vernier. This is very important. Never fail to read your Vernier if you want to really tell if you are at the pole. The Vernier consists of a little ruler business that's marked with notches telling you how much horizon has piled up between the sun an' what you can see of the earth. Now you take out your watch an' wait till noon, an' if after lookin' through the mirrors a number of times you find that the object seen through these mirrors, which is perpendicular to the same plane and the angular distance of the object from its image is double the inclination of the mirrors, then all you have to do is to dip your machine so's one of the stars you can see is nearly coincident with the other star, then the reading of the arc will tell you the angle required, an' if it reads, on March 21, the day Mr. Cook discovered the pole, that the sun is 11 degrees an' 48 minutes above the horizon of the earth, why there you are, right at the pole."

"That's how you can tell when you've found it, as I said, if you are workin' with a sextant; but if you're usin' a theodolite, why it's a heap easier. Mr. Cook found the pole in just that way, an' a year later Peary sent his tracks and follows him up there, I don't know, but I think Mr. Cook only had a sextant, while Peary, bein' more fashionable, may have had a theodolite; an' for that reason he thought he could beat Cook to it. But he'll have to show me, that's all."

KORTH HEARING TONIGHT.

Precinct Officers Declare He Was Not The Nominee.

Mrs. S. B. Reid, secretary of the Third ward Democratic committee, declares in answer to the temporary writ of mandamus obtained by William J. Korth to compel the committee to issue him a certificate of nomination as a councilman from the Third precinct, that he has misrepresented the facts. Korth relies upon the fact that he was elected upon the first ballot taking. Mrs. Reid declares that the ballot was never counted. Before the ballot was taken it was decided to ballot again if any irregular ballots were cast. When the tellers were counting the ballots they discovered several votes with only William J. Korth's name on them. The tellers called for a new vote but Korth and his supporters objected. The ward convention adjourned and reported back to the mass convention that the members of the Third ward were unable to agree. The mass convention sent them back to take another ballot on the ballot on the other ballot John Holley and H. J. Walters were chosen as councilmen. In regard to the first ballot, Mrs. Reid declares that it was never counted, and that she never announced the result of it. The affidavit filed by Korth, Mrs. Reid says, reflects upon the honesty of Berley Hill, chairman, and herself. The hearing on the writ of mandamus will be called in Judge Armstrong's court at 1:30 o'clock tonight. Mrs. Reid and Mr. Hill will produce the minutes of the meeting to prove their contention.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. W. S. McCormick will entertain at a bridge tea next Monday.

Mrs. T. R. Black is posting this afternoon at a Kensington. The rooming being bright with autumn tints and a number of friends assisting.

A reunion of the members of the late

Nathaniel V. Jones family was held at the home of Mrs. Mary Jones Chapman on Wednesday evening, the event being the annual birthday gathering. The time was most enjoyably spent with music and reminiscence, and an interesting feature was the reading of an article written in the Birmingham Post during N. V. Jones's mission in England, describing in highly complimentary terms his character and appearance. A supper preceded the program and about 45 were present.

Last night Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Stewart gave a surprise party in honor of the birthday anniversary of their brother James Galt, about 15 friends being present and spending a delightful evening with music and games. A dainty supper was served.

Tomorrow Mrs. E. S. Wright will entertain the Daughters of the Republic at her home, and a most interesting program has been planned for the afternoon including the reading of the Constitution by Mrs. E. R. Wells, followed by a discussion led by Mrs. Julia A. F. Lund, the reading of Patrick Henry's oration by Mrs. J. D. Spencer, and a paper on the First National bank and George Washington, by Mrs. Phoebe Y. Beattie.

Miss Ine Morrison is guest of honor this afternoon at a bridge tea given by Mrs. Corry Marshall.

The current event and current literature section of the Ladies' Literary club will meet at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the clubhouse. Miss Linda Jenson will read the last short story of the late Miss Emily Jacobs, Mrs. E. M. Grout will read an original poem. Music will be furnished by Miss Trina Symms and Miss Mildred Lovell of Chicago, Ill.

The Daughters of the Confederacy will give a social this evening at the home of Mrs. Schoelling at 463 east Fifth South street.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Read have issued invitations for the wedding of their daughter Emma and Victor P. Felt to take place on Oct. 26, at their home on east First South street.

Yesterday Miss Louise Aylard and George E. Parkin were married in the temple and in the evening a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Capt. and Mrs. Aylard, about 50 being present. The rooms were beautifully decorated, the pastor in satsum leaves and red roses, the dining room in dahlias and the living room in pink and white carnations. A stringed orchestra furnished delightful music and a number of relatives and friends assisted. The bride wore a handsome gown of white silk and carried brides' roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Leona Aylard, and Green Parkin, the groom's brother was best man. After Oct. 24, Mr. and Mrs. Parkin will be at home at 100 Vidas avenue.

Mrs. M. B. Whitney entertained at a luncheon yesterday, the decorations being in autumn flowers and covers laid for about a dozen guests.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Davis entertained at a dinner at the Alta club yesterday, the table being effectively decorated and covers laid for about a dozen guests.

NEW INCORPORATIONS.

Articles of incorporation of the J. A. Robinson company of Salt Lake were filed yesterday with the county clerk. The capital stock of the corporation is $50,000, divided into 500 shares. The officers are: J. A. Robinson, with 2,000 shares, president; Howard Dutcher with 2,000 shares, vice president and secretary; C. N. Sampson with 2,000 shares, treasurer. There, with T. E. Mayo and N. A. Robertson, holding 1 share each.
