LIFE OF THE CANAL BUILDERS

Things Apt to Surprise New Arrivals at Panama—People Very Hospitable.

THE Americans who go to Panama attracted by the building of the canal will find many things to surprise them, says the New York Sun.

They will probably meet with a very hearty welcome in Panama society, but the etiquette of that society will bother them at first. It has been said that social customs in Colombia are largely the reverse of all that obtain with the Anglo-Saxon races.

The green American might settle down in his home and wait for people to call on him. He might wait until doomsday, so far as Panamanians were concerned. His proper course is to send around his cards to the families he wishes to have call upon him. Within a few days they will all call. The obligation is absolutely binding on them, but they need not pay a second call unless they wish to cultivate the man's acquaintance.

There is hardly any informal calling. You must notify people during the day that you are going to call on them in the evening, which is the proper time.

The hostess and her daughters will sit in rocking chairs and rock themselves to and fro violently throughout the call. Do not imagine that this is discourtesy on their part; it is just a habit. They always sit in rocking chairs, except at meals, and they can no more help rocking than quack-salver can help moving.

But a young, unattached American must be wary. If he calls more than twice at a house where there are daughters people will begin to talk. If he calls often some responsible member of the family would be fully justified by local etiquette in asking his intentions.

It would be simply outrageous for him to take a girl of good family out for a walk in the evening. If he wants to see her at all, he must pay the formal call described.

The fair maid will rock shyly in a corner of the room, and between her and the young man will stand a dragon, her mother, maiden aunts and elder sisters will range themselves. After greetings have been exchanged and everybody has settled down comfortably to rock there will ensue an awkward silence. Then the young American, driven to desperation, will venture the brilliant remark that it is hot weather.

"Yes," the hostess admits. "It is hot." Another silence. "For the time of year," she adds, with the air of one who has made a great discovery.

Presently, one of the maiden aunts hopes that the senior had a good voyage from America. Receiving an affirmative reply she recounts, with an astonishing amount of detail, her experience of seasickness on her solitary ocean voyage from Cartagena to Colon.

A mulatto servant brings in cups of chocolate and dishes of candies and preserved fruits. This leads to a long discussion of the kind of candies eaten in the United States.

When that discussion dies out at last for lack of fuel, the American finds it is time to go, and he has not a chance to exchange a single word with the girl he really came to see.

A visit becomes more lively and entertaining when one grows intimate with the family, but as a general rule the dragons do not relax their severe vigilance.

There is no lack of amusements, for the Panamanians are fond of dancing, concerts, operas and theatrical performances. Cock fights, bull fights and lotteries are also considered by them essential to a happy life.

The devotees of rod and gun can obtain plenty of exciting sport on the isthmus. The shark fishing in the Bay of Panama is as good as anywhere else in the world, and enormous alligators may be shot on both sides of the isthmus.

The shark is hooked and drawn on deck, care being taken that he shall not bite. He is laid down on boards, and his fins are securely nailed thereto in such a way that he cannot use them.

The tail is then cut off and the unfortunate animal is thrown overboard. He cannot swim and he cannot steer himself. He is helpless, and the other members of his own family promptly attack and devour him.

On the isthmus, as in all tropical countries, plenty of vigorous outdoor exercise is essential to the preservation of health. Riding, tennis, hunting, rowing and swimming should be the daily sports of Americans who go down there.

In that relaxing climate there is a constant temptation to live the dolce far niente life like the natives, but the man who does so feels the heat of the climate far more than his neighbor who goes in for vigorous exercise.

It is best not to work too hard nor for too many hours a day. The sleek should not be misled. The man who tries to do much on the isthmus will soon end by being unable to do anything.

Whiskey is bad, brandy worse and beer worst of all in the tropics. If a man must drink, the least harmful thing to take is Jamaica rum, diluted with water and the juice of the lime.

But a man's health in the tropics depends largely upon his being strictly temperate in his mode of living.

A Canadian doctor who lived five years in Panama gave the following advice: "Get up early—say at 6 or 7. Begin the day with a bath, and then have coffee, oranges and rolls. Have breakfast at 11 or 12, and let it be a good, hearty meal, which people in temperate climates would regard as a middie dinner."

"In common with many old residents of the tropics, I used to begin mine by taking some ripe fruit and following it with a beefsteak, yams, potatoes and coffee. I always made my meals simple and found that it paid to do so."

"Have dinner at 6 and follow it up with a quiet evening. Smoke a cigar on the veranda or play a game of chess with a friend. Go to bed at 9 or 10 o'clock."
